CONGRESSWOMAN DEFIES 'DRYS'

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Rich Baker of Quincy snapped on their honeymoon today. The husband has been sued for $250,000 heart balm by the bride's mother, Mrs. Lyyli M. Ek. Mrs. Ek says Baker jilted her so he could wed her daughter.

FIGHT PROMOTER, WAITING FOR KEARNS, SHOT

Scranton, Pa., April 15 (I.N.S.).—Louis Pagnotti, Old Forge political leader and promoter of the Walker-Latzo fight, was shot at Old Forge today and is dying at the Taylor Hospital. Police said he was shot without warning by Anthony Venzuriello. Pagnotti had come here to meet Jack Kearns, Walker's manager, for the signing of articles and the posting of forfeits for the fight.

BOND BROKER KILLED IN PLUNGE OFF ROOF

New York, April 15 (A.P.).—Henry Montague Vickers, fifty-five, a bond broker, was killed today when he fell or jumped from the roof of the Milano apartments in West Fifty-eighth street, where he lived.

DEMANDS NATION VOTE; CHARGES PLOTS; HILL HOLDS WINE IS LEGAL

Washington, April 15 (A.P.).—Arguments by anti-Volstead members of the House, interspersed with a vivid description of how fancy distilling is done, today carried toward its conclusion the demonstration of the wets before the Senate Prohibition Committee.

The lesson in whiskey making was given by Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, the lone wet on the committee. He put into evidence a bevy of small stills, a charred keg, some corn sugar, and samples of flavoring extracts which he said went to make up the finished product of the illicit liquor manufacture.

The articles were identified for the senator by federal enforcement officials. Mr. Reed then presented Commerce Department figures showing that consumption of corn sugar more than tripled between 1919 and 1925.

Representative Hill, Republican, Maryland, head of the wet bloc in the House, called for the House advocates of a change in the dry laws, using his own acquittal some months ago by a Maryland jury as a precedent to support his contention that the making of drink with a substantial alcoholic content is constitutional.

One of the three women representatives in Congress, Mrs. Mary T. Norton, Democrat, New Jersey, a former welfare worker, advocated a national referendum on the question of bringing to an end the present "horrible condition."

Questioned by Senator Reed, she said the effect of prohibition had been to "ruin a great many of our young people." She read a letter to

McKinley 'Content'; Blames His Defeat on Hearst Papers

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, April 15.

SENATOR WILLIAM B. McKINLEY, of Illinois, today credited the Hearst newspapers, which led the fight against him on the World Court issue, with being largely responsible for bringing about his defeat for renomination in the primaries on Tuesday. In a formal statement he said:

"The people of Illinois have sent me to Washington for twenty years. In this primary I was recommended for renomination by all Republican papers in Chicago. I was supported for re-election by nearly all of the daily down-State papers.

"The only pronounced opposition that I know of was by the Hearst papers and by papers whose editors are on the State payroll of the

A bill authorizing the city of Boston and other cities and towns of the Commonwealth to pay the widows and children of policemen and firemen killed in the performance of their duties an annuity not to exceed the salary of the deceased was today filed in the House of Representatives at the request of the Boston Evening American.

The sponsors of the joint measure are Representative Bernard P. Casey, Democrat, of Boston, and Representative John Thomas, Republican, of Gloucester.

The bill is non-partisan and non-political. It was inspired by purely

BRIDE SMILES AT MA'S SUIT

No matter how angry her ma may be, the bride of Reuben Rich Baker, wealthy Quincy yachtsman, who is sued for $250,000 breach of promise by his bride's mother intends to let nothing mar her romance, she insisted smilingly today.

Her mother, Mrs. Lyyli M. Ek, former housekeeper for Baker, tried to her daughter in the race for Baker's hand, and now, in her suit, the mother alleges that Baker's foot slipped when he failed to live up to a proposal of marriage he made her.

But the daughter, who went by the name of Lillian Wallin in Mil-

'BUD' ROBBED OF $50,000 GEMS

New York, April 15 (I.N.S.).—A jewel thief, working as a window cleaner, entered the Park avenue apartment of Miss Muriel H. Wurts Dundas, heiress and one of last season's debutantes, and stole jewelry valued at $50,000.

Two pearl necklaces and two diamond brooches were taken. The jewelry was in a bureau drawer.

Miss Dundas is the daughter of the late Ralph H. Wurts Dundas, who died at Gloucester, Mass., in 1921, leaving a large estate to his widow and daughter.

Miss Dundas obtained $70,000 a year from the estate of her granduncle, J. Dundas Lapsley, through a decision of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court.

COOLIDGE SUFFERS INDIGESTION ATTACK

Washington, April 15 (A.P.).—A mild attack of indigestion caused President Coolidge to cancel engagements today and retire to the executive mansion.

The illness made its appearance yesterday and the President remained in the mansion most of the afternoon.

He was visited twice by Major Coupal, his physician, but went to the executive offices as usual today.

Feeling no better, however, he cancelled a heavy engagement list and returned at 11 o'clock to the White House, in the hope of conquering the trouble by rest.

Major Coupal visited him there and indicated the indisposition was not regarded as serious.

A year ago the President suffered a similar attack, but it kept him away from the executive offices only a few hours.

A Pullman's Advantages
You Can Look Out
See Arizona
Real Promised Land

(Copyright, 1926, by the Star Company)

"A SHIP," Dr. Johnson wrote to Mrs. Thrale, "has all the disadvantages of a prison, with the additional disadvantage of being unsafe."

A Pullman compartment in which this is written has, quite the other way, all the advantages of a tomb, with two added advantages. Most important:

You can look out of the window.

And there are no worms.

IN A PULLMAN "drawing room," as in the tomb, you have all your possessions with you, all your troubles far away. No telephone rings, nobody calls with a letter of introduction, nobody wants to sell you anything, or buy anything.

IN THE SLEEPER, as in the tomb, you have left one place and are going to another. The inside of the Pullman, as of the coffin, is carefully padded, you sleep as long as you please. The porter, like the Angel Gabriel, is considerate, and waits.

IN THE COFFIN, as in the train, you travel. Our real journey is with the sun, through space. Little trips, going to and fro on the earth, do not amount to much.

IN THE COFFIN you travel with the earth around the sun about 550,000,000 miles every year. And you travel even further as the sun drags you and the earth through space we know not whither—perhaps to some final landing place where all earth's souls are discharged at once as a ship unloads its cargo at the end of a voyage.

OUT OF THIS car window, on the Southern Pacific's Sunset Limited, you now see the State of Arizona, big as New England, with the population of Cleveland scttled over its vast

CONGRESS CAN LEGALIZE 11 P. C. WINE SALES, HILL SHOWS

WOMAN IN HOT DEFI TO DRYS

ing of the sale of poisonous liquor in a veterans' bureau hospital, with the result that some of its patients died. The name of the hospital was withheld.

Representative Kindred, Democrat, New York, a physician, declared experimente which he had conducted on himself and others had "proven conclusively" that the 2.75 per cent. beer sold during the war was non-intoxicating.

PROVES WINE LEGAL

"Not only that," he said, "but such beer taken to the full capacity of a normal stomach would not exhilirate more than three cups of coffee. Such beer would not be unwholesome to the masses of the people.

Congress has the power to permit and legalize cider and wine containing possibly from 2.7 to 11.68 per cent. of alcohol to be sold for use in the home, Representative Hill declared.

Hill, a leader of the wets in the House, based his statement upon decisions of the courts in the case brought against him by the government because he manufactured such cider and wine in his home.

The case, he said, was tried under Section 299 of the Volstead act permitting the manufacture in the home of non-intoxicating cider and wine.

The jury held liquors of this alcoholic content were not intoxicating and the government did not appeal.

Representative Hill was the first of a number of members of the House who appeared to close the case for the wets.

WETS TO HAVE CLOSE.

At the outset it was agreed that the wets could take up the remainder of their time with argument at the close of the general debate by the drys.

Bishop James J. Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, interposed some objection, suggesting that the drys have the closing, but Senator Goff, Republican, West Virginia, said wets had the affirmative and under the usual practice should have the closing.

While Representative Hill was talking Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, came into the room and there were brought in a number of fancy looking stills.

Senator Reed announced that he had not finished his examination of Assistant Secretary Andrews in charge of prohibition enforcement. He picked up a steam pressure cooker and asked Geanral Andrews if that could not be used as a still. The general referred the Senator to Dr. James Dorn, chemist of the prohibition unit, who conceded that the cooker would make a still, but a rather inperfect one.

Dr. Dorn had a still of his own, consisting of a copper pot, with a tube leading off and a condenser.

"AGEING" NEW LIQUOR.

Then Reed produced a gallon capacity charred keg, which it was conceded could be used to "age" liquor.

Next Reed produced a small package containing charred oak sticks. These are sold in Washington, and Dr. Dorn said they could be used to "ripen" whiskey.

Corn sugar, from which Reed developed yesterday that liquor could be made, next was produced. Dorn identified it as such by tasting.

BIG SUGAR SALES.

The Missouri Senator then produced a Department of Commerce report showing that corn sugar consumption had advanced from 152,870,000 pounds in 1919 to 527,909,513 in 1925.

"If that proportionate increase kept up then we are using now something over 1,000,000,000 pounds a year," observed Reed.

Praising extracts for rye and bourbon whiskey and Holland gin were put in evidence.

The referendum on prohibition was urged in a statement filed by Representative Mary T. Norton, declaring prohibition and temperance "have no relation to each other," she said:

"It would seem that there is but one solution of the question, put it to a vote of the people and allow them to decide definitely whether or not they are in favor of prohibition.

ANTI-SALOON "TRUCKING."

"If the Anti-Saloon League is honest it must acknowledge that whatever it had hoped to accomplish, the result is disastrous, and surely it should be open-minded enough to reverse its position for the benefit of our young America.

"The only class of people in this country today who should be working for prohibition is the bootlegger."

Mrs. Norton's statement contained a letter from J. D. Wyrick of Fountain City, Tenn., charging corruption among enforcement officers, National and State.

"The Anti-Saloon League and the prohibition party in general," said the letter, "have resorted to every low-down trait of tactics that can be thought of to strengthen the cause of prohibition."

CONNERY FOR WINE.

Representative Hill filed statements for a half-dozen Congressmen, a half-dozen others filed their statements for themselves, and it was announced that two score more would submit their views in writing later.

Representative Connery Democrat, Massachusetts, who said he had been a total abstainer all his life, was one of those who advocated light wines and beer.

The committee also heard Dr. Samuel Harden Church, president of the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh, who complained that Prohibition Director Baird had published an advertisement calling on the students of his institution to spy on their fellows and become informers.

The witness added that in pre-prohibition days young folks had their dances and there was no suggestion of drinking, but that now drinking at dances is general.

DECISION NEAR IN WILLIAMS COCKTAIL CASE

Marine Corps Barracks, San Diego, Cal., April 15 (I.N.S.).—Drugs vs. cocktails.

That was the question to be decided today by the jury of admirals and other high navy officials at the court martial of Colonel Alexander Williams, distinguished soldier of the sea, charged with drunkenness in a public place by General Smedley D. Butler, Marine Corps "dry" crusader.

Following arguments of prosecution and defense counsel, the fate of the Colonel was to be determined today by the court martial board members who had before them testimony of the Colonel's accuser that he was "staggering drunk" in the fashionable Hotel Del Coronado here the night of March 6 and the case of the defense that the officer was sick from effects of a drug used to counteract a bladder infection.

A persistent rumor was in circulation that Butler would again appear before the board as a rebuttal witness to tell more of his investigation of the colonel's "cocktail" dinner party and later visit to the hotel.

The board desired to hear a more complete statement from the general regarding his obtaining signed statements from the accused's brother officers who were guests the night he was alleged to have been intoxicated.

$200,000 BLAZE FOUGHT 7 HOURS IN ELIZABETH

Elizabeth, N. J., April 15 (A.P.).—The Broad street business section between Elizabeth avenue and Dickinson street, and nearly a score of dwellings in Dickinson and Jefferson streets were threatened when fire destroyed the old Lyceum Theatre building. The fire was conquered only after a seven-hour battle. Early estimates of the losses ran up to $200,000.

street, after he had closed the flames in the basement.

The fire caused $1,200 damage to the building, and would have reached a higher total had it not been for Sharkey's discovery when he went to his piazza to get his police dog that always accompanies him on his road jaunts.

FINDS FIRE IN CELLAR.

Early every morning Sharkey rolls out of the bed and does his road work to keep in condition and he began his program today in the same way.

He intended first to go to his garage and get the car that would bring him home after his run, but he decided first to pick up the dog, his pet, that sleeps on the back piazza.

When Sharkey went on the piazza he saw smoke curling up from the ground floor and flames licking out the rear door. Racing down the one flight to the street level, he swung open the basement door and was greeted by a burst of flame that scorched his face.

He closed the door tightly, ran upstairs again, quietly awakened his wife, who is in a delicate condition, and after leading her out, aroused the other five families and aided them to the street, while the smoke filled the building.

Firemen made short work of the blaze that the heavyweight fighter had locked in the building, but Sharkey's training schedule for the day was wrecked at its inception.

ton, the Wallin being her mother's maiden name, was complacent and smiling today when she was questioned regarding her victory over her Ma.

She may have been bland and smiling, but she was just as silent, his former house-keeper.

DENIES PROMISE TO WED.

He said that the filing of the papers was no surprise to him, as Mrs. Ek had appeared "considerably angry because she lost her easy position when I decided to marry again. She heard of my intended marriage a short time ago," said Mr. Baker, "and from what I had heard this suit is no surprise to me.

"Her statements that I promised to marry her are absurd, so absurd, in fact, that they are almost not worth discussing. Mrs. Ek had been my housekeeper for about 10 or 11 years, having served in that capacity before I was divorced from the first Mrs. Baker. My wife wanted a career in preference to a home, and I divorced her on the grounds of desertion. She is now in Europe.

JUST A "HOUSEKEEPER."

"Mrs. Ek remained as my housekeeper after my wife's departure, but most of the time my sister was also residing at the house at No. 51 Beech street, Quincy. I never gave Mrs. Ek any presents except the usual ones that are presented at Christmas time. I paid her $18 a week and she had little to do. At times I even took her to the theatre, but she never, of course, accompanied me on any trips.

LOVE LETTERS IN CASE.

He denied once more that he ever proposed to his mother-in-law before she became that, and he denied also that he had even encouraged her.

At one time, he said, he noted through certain remarks Mrs. Ek made that she was becoming fond of him, and he found it necessary to warn her against her feelings. He believed for a time that she had taken his advice, he said, but later she again indicated that she held him in more regard than he cared for.

From the other camp in the battle of love, J. Alfred Anderson, Finnish consul at Boston, and counsel for Mrs. Ek, declared that ardent love and kisses will warm up the $250,000 love trial.

The love and kisses, according to Consul Anderson, were contained in letters sent by Baker to his housekeeper when he was in Jamaica.

Even as the comely Finnish woman filed her suit, her daughter and Baker started their honeymoon at the new Hotel Kenmore in the Back Bay.

Like her mother the new Mrs. Baker is attractive. Her mother was divorced from Ek so that she and Baker bride was known in Milton,

QUINN ON TRIAL WITH 16 OTHERS IN RUM PLOT

Absence of three defendants caused a delay today as the trial of former Police Chief William L. Quinn and seventeen others, including two former Federal rum sleuths, on charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law, was called in Federal District Court.

One of the missing defendants, Francis J. Ward of Swampscott, was ordered defaulted. He was later found by Swampscott police, upon instruction from the Federal authorities, and was brought to court.

George Maccia and George W. Garrett were missing when the roll of defendants was called, but they arrived a short time afterward, with satisfactory explanations.

CASE OF ONE DROPPED.

A fourth defendant, Arthur Brown of Lynn, was also absent, but Assistant District Attorney Hubert C. Thompson explained to Judge Morton that the government was not going to proceed on its charges against him. Brown is said to be in the South.

Judge Morton warned the defendants and counsel that any failure to appear daily or any tardiness would promptly be met with an order to him to put them in custody during the remainder of the trial, which is expected to last three weeks.

As the trial got under way the number of spectators rapidly increased until a line formed in the corridor.

ONE PLEADS GUILTY.

The government charges that Quinn and the others were involved in a plan to smuggle liquor ashore at Swampscott, near Little's Point and Gallop's Point, in the vicinity of the last Summer White House of President Coolidge.

John F. Cryan, one of the alleged conspirators, who pleaded guilty several weeks ago, answered to his name with the other defendants. The rest have pleaded not guilty. William H. Achorn was the last to do so, just before drawing of the jurors began.

Other defendants are Hugh Wyllie and William L. Newell, both former Federal prohibition agents; Patrick J. McDonnell, Joshua B. Acker, Harry, George and Fred Brown, Sam Armstrong, David Sigel, Joseph Stein and William Miller.

MAN ENDS LIFE AFTER DRAWING SAVINGS

Frank Zlomanjec, 69, after drawing his savings from a Wakefield savings bank, moved from the two rooms which he rented from Mrs. Harry Nikitin, Tuesday, to the home of his brother.

Unknown to the landlady, he returned to his former residence, No. 66 Valley street, Wakefield, locked the doors of the two rooms and committed suicide. He was found on the floor with a gas tube connected with an open jet, in his mouth.

PUTS FEVER TO ROUT IN LONELY FIGHT

Miss Marjorie Hirtle of Worcester Pictures Struggle for Life as Doctor Is Stricken

Worcester, April 15.—How Miss Marjorie Hirtle, Worcester nurse, attached to the Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell mission in northern Newfoundland, subdued a scarlet fever epidemic in a single-handed fight in the frozen wastes, was revealed here today.

Her mother, Mrs. Charles W. Hirtle, has just received the first word from her since January 23. Three letters arrived simultaneously. The latest is dated February 20.

The fever epidemic broke out in a desolate region where villages are scattered over an icebound area 30 miles wide. Snows and intense cold made travel hazardous. Most of Miss Hirtle's travel was done by dog sled.

The situation became critical when Dr. Mount, in charge of the base hospital at St. Anthony, two days' journey from Miss Hirtle's headquarters was stricken with the disease. Miss Hirtle was left to fight the epidemic alone.

Despite storms and blizzards, Miss Hirtle went from hamlet to hamlet nursing the stricken natives. Messengers were dispatched from time to time to the hospital for serum.

Working almost incessantly, Miss Hirtle finally mastered the situation and reports to her mother that the epidemic is well in hand.

'Pastoral Honeymoon' for Browning and 'Peaches'

GUARDIAN CHARGES DROPPED

"Daddy" Predicts Marriage to "Baby Bride" Will Prove an "Endless Romance"

New York, April 15 (A.P.).—The improper guardianship case involving Mrs. Katherine Heenan and her daughter, Frances, 13-year-old bride of Edward W. Browning, 61, wealthy real estate operator, was dismissed in children's court today.

The complaint, which Mrs. Browning was called with her mother to answer, was entered by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children prior to the marriage. Justice Hoyt said he felt that an investigation now could serve no useful purpose.

Neither Mrs. Browning, her husband her parents nor attorneys representing them were in court when the case was called. After waiting a few minutes a court clerk bellowed out: "Are there any witnesses in the Frances Heenan case present?"

There was no response. The Judge then dismissed the case.

Soon after announcement was made that the case had been dropped Browning issued a statement saying he planned a "pastoral honeymoon" for himself and "Peaches."

In his statement, the first he has made since his marriage, the wealthy real estate man, who is 31 years old, described his courtship of the girl as "romantic and beautiful" and the outgrowth of "love at first sight enthusiastically reciprocated." The romance, he said, "promises to be an endless one."

"My taste and inclinations are essentially domestic," he said in the statement. "My greatest ambition is to preside over a happy home and family.

"My ideals were rudely shattered by the unfortunate outcome of my first marriage," he added, "but time has convinced me that they can be restored and mended.

"I have found companionship in some degree with my adopted daughter, Dorothy. I sought to find for her a companion who might be as an elder sister. This idea, resupon me until the advent of Spring, when I met forth with all the ardor of youth—and met Frances Heenan."

The necessity of medical treatment for acid burns, which the girl said were inflicted by an intruder in her mother's Manhattan apartment before the marriage, caused a postponement of their honeymoon trip, Browning said.

"Whether the injuries suffered by my Frances at the hands of an acid thrower were the result of jealousy I cannot say," Browning wrote in his statement.

FORM NIGHT TRAFFIC SQUADS

Police Commissioner Wilson Gets 51 Volunteers in His First Call

Formation of a new night squad to handle traffic at congested downtown and Back Bay points, was announced today by Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson.

The new squads will relieve regular route officers who in the past have been taken off their beats to do night duty.

A call for volunteers from the ranks has brought fourth fifty-one candidates for the new squad. All of the men have been in service more than a year. They wil be trained under Captains Hoppe and Laffey, in charge of the two traffic divisions of the police force.

The squad is expected to be completed within a month. As soon as the night squad is completed, route officers who are doing night duty will go back to their regular beats.

Commissioner Wilson expressed himself as very gratified at the prompt response to his call for men for the new squad. All of the men in the squad have had some experience in handling traffic.

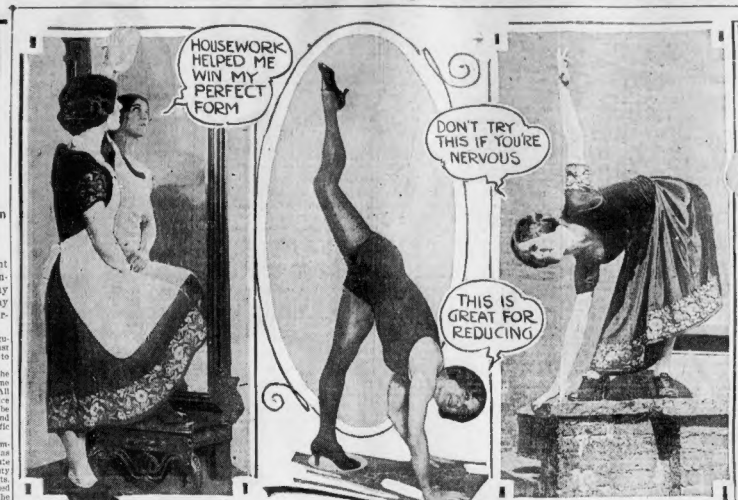
DIVORCES WIFE AS RESULT OF RAID

The sequel to a midnight raid last January in Cambridge came in Middlesex Probate Court today when James Harold Goething won a divorce from Jennie Churchill Dewitt Goething. The husband testified that in a raid on the Mt. Auburn suite of a wealthy Cambridge man he found his wife in the arms of another. The couple were married at Presque Isle, Me., in March, 1917, and lived several years in Toledo, O., returning to Reading to make their home. He claims she deserted him in July, 1924. Judge Harris granted him the custody of his small daughter, Cynthia.

ALL ROADS BLOCKED FOR 3 MAINE JAIL-BREAKERS

Skowhegan, Me., April 15 (A.P.).—Sheriff John F. Healey declared today that the three prisoners who escaped from Somerset County Jail here last evening, cannot get away. Every avenue of escape has been plugged, he said, and their recapture within 24 hours is expected.

The men, Thomas Fears and Fred Quirion of Jackman and Joseph Vashon of Skowhegan, were to have been taken to State Prison today to serve short sentences for breaking entering and larceny. They escaped by sawing a bar in a corridor window and springing the other bar enough so they could squeeze through and jump to the ground.



Louise Mele, 17, winner in a recent contest, has been declared the most perfectly formed girl in New York. Her home is down town and her physique has been developed in home exercise.

She is acrobatic and one of her methods of keeping fit is to stand on a china plate. This gives her grace, poise and buoyancy. If you think this stunt is easy, try it yourself. Int. Reel Photos.

PERFECT GIRL

Miss Mele refutes the idea that perfection of form can only be obtained in exclusive localities or gymnastic environment. It is the result of one's own capabilities, she says.

Because of her perfect form, self-achieved, in her Lafayette street home, in New York, she won a silver cup in contest with many other beauties.

DILLON MAN IN DODGE CONTROL

Detroit, Mich., April 15 (I.N.S.).—Election of Edward G. Wilmer, a partner in Dillon, Reed & Co., New York bankers, to the presidency of Dodge Brothers, Inc., and the retirement of Ray, Robert and Joseph Graham from the company was announced today. The changes were made at a meeting of the board of directors presided over by Clarence Dillon, whose banking firm recently bought control of the Dodge Company.

A complete amalgamation of the Dodge Brothers and Graham Brothers, one of the largest truck and bus manufacturing companies in the country, was affected by the purchas of 49 per cent. of the Graham Brothers' stock by the Dodge Company, it was announcde.

Frederick L. Haynes, former president of Dodge, will remain as chairman of the board of irectors. Wilmer is chairman of the boar of directors of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company.

ARRESTED IN $9,000 THEFT

On a secret indictment warrant charging larceny of nine Liberty bonds, valued at $9,000, from the Roxbury Charitable Association, Police Inspectors Farrell and Haggerty today arrested Frank L. Noonan, thirty-nine, a salesman, at his home in Savin Hill avenue, Dorchester.

SHOE PLANT IS SAVED FROM HEAVY FIRE LOSS

Fire caused damage of $300 today in the building at No. 16 Bristol street occupied by the National Shoe Company. The blaze started on the top floor of the four-story brick structure. A passerby saw smoke and notified fire headquarters, situated in the same street. The flames were quickly extinguished after a small amount of stock was destroyed. The cause was undetermined.

CITY CLUB WILL ELECT NINE

Members of the Boston City Club were notified today the annual election of the club will take place Tuesday, between noon and 7:30 p. m.

Nine of the board of governors will be chosen; eight in accordance with the by-laws, and one to fill the unexpired term of William H. Root. Seven members of the nominating committee will be chosen.

"Regular" nominees for the board are: Franklin W. Ganse, general agent of the Columbian National Life Insurance Company; Herbert W. Jackson, Herbert F. Jenkins, director of Little, Brown & Co.; Richard J. Lane, lawyer; Moses S. Lourie, lawyer; Walter Powers, lawyer; Frank E. Rowe and Llewellyn D. Seaver.

William L. Mowll, architect, has been named as candidate to fill the unexpired term of Colonel Rout.

John J. Cassidy, William Coulson and Edward Manahan are independent candidates.

Oh, Women! Just Hear What She Says of You!

Chicago, April 15 (A.P.).—"The ignorance of many women voters is appalling," says Mrs. Bertha Baur, unsuccessful candidate for Republican congressional nomination, who takes her defeat with a smile.

"They are ignorant of politics," said Mrs. Baur, speaking of members of her sex whom she met at the polls. "I saw many come to vote without ever having registered. Some wanted to take their ballots home. Some wanted their relatives to go into the booths and help them to mark their ballots."

Wants England Dry

New York, April 15.—General Bramwell Booth, International head of the Salvation Army, who arrived today from London said he would be delighted to see prohibition adopted in England.

CODMAN PRIZE CATTLE SAVED FROM FIRE

More than 100 head of thoroughbred prize cattle were saved today as fire destroyed five buildings, Green Lodge Gardens, country estate and farm of Edmund D. Codman, Boston lawyer, industrial magnate and gentleman farmer at Westwood.

The loss was estimated at $20,000. A sixth building, occupied by nine employes of the estate, was threatened as the fire burned toward it, but the structure was saved.

Help was summoned from Dedham to fight the flames, but the five buildings were doomed by the time firemen arrived at the scene.

The cattle were led out of their barn by workmen as flames licked the building.

The destroyed buildings were the dairy, cowbarn, garage, henhouse and hay-loft, all one-story wooden structures.

Besides the house occupied by the farmhands and supervisors, several other smaller buildings were saved. The Westwood and Dedham firemen were handicapped b ythe necessity of carrying hose lines several hundred feet long across the estate.

Edward A. Stanford, in charge of the place, could give no explanation of the origin of the fire.

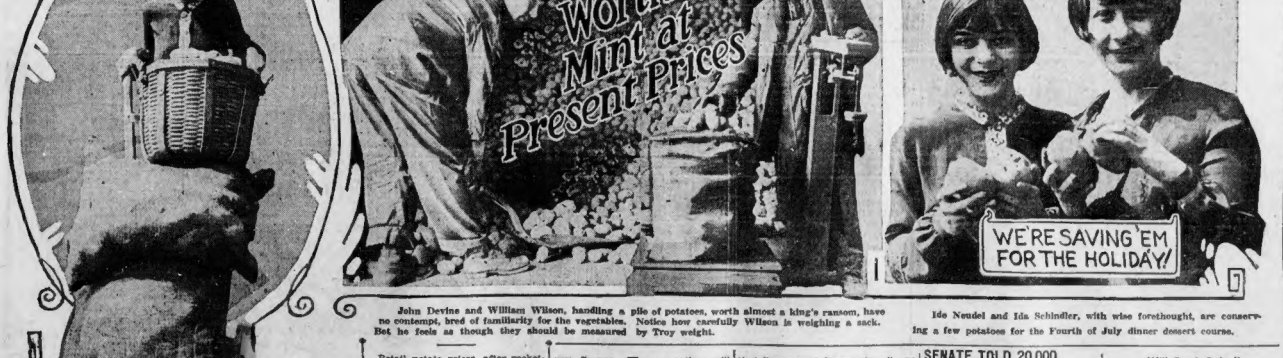
"RECREATIONAL HERETIC" RESIGNS FROM CHURCH

Palmyra, Ind., April 14 (A.P.)—Refusing to meet the requirements laid down by the elders of the Church of Christ here, W. Clyde Martin, convicted as a "recreational heretic," has withdrawn his church membership, he said today, adding that he would continue to operate Ranger Hall here. The elders protested against the scarcity of clothing worn by basketball players, operation of slot machines, and roller skating at Ranger Hall. Martin also announced he is "in the race to a finish" for the Republican nomination for Congress in the third Indiana congressional district at the May primary.

EMPLOYE FOUND DEAD IN MEDFORD STABLE

Richard Lawrence, 46-year-old employe of the Good Riding Stable, No. 41 Franklin avenue, Medford, was found dead on the floor of the stable today. Lawrence had no home and had been permitted to sleep in the barn and apparently died from natural causes, Medical Examiner Durell was notified and police are trying to reach a brother said to live at No. 154 East 84th street, New York City.

POTATO BUYING RUSH KEEPS RETAIL PRICE SOARING; GOING HIGHER



With potatoes retailing in the Hub at $1.25 a peck, Ida Neudel cannot be blamed for the smile of conscious pride which she radiates as she perches above a few bushels of "spuds."

John Devine and William Wilson, handling a pile of potatoes, worth almost a king's ransom, have no contempt, bred of familiarity for the vegetables. Notice how carefully Wilson is weighing a sack. Bet he feels as though they should be measured by Troy weight.

Ida Neudel and Ida Schindler, with wise forethought, are conserving a few potatoes for the Fourth of July dinner dessert course.

Retail potato prices, after rocketing to $1.25 a peck, held firm today, but the heavy demand and scarcity of supply threatened to boost the price still higher.

While housewives in Boston and Worcester were urged to cut their consumption, heavy buying by New York markets kept the price at wintury figures. Warm weather will force Maine farmers, now riding a high price wave, to unload, a Worcester produce man said today.

Prices in Boston ranged from 99 cents to $1.25 a peck.

While one large Boston retail house was selling at $1.09, officials said the price could not be kept at that figure much longer, since it was due to advance buying.

While some retailers reported normal supplies, others said their stores were limited.

J. Charles May, Worcester produce man, charged speculators with hoarding a normal supply to produce a fictitious price.

HORSE OWNERS WARNED OF "BLACKWATER" FEVER

The Boston Workhorse Relief Association has issued a warning that, with holiday Monday, horses will have two idle days, and will be liable to the disease known as "blackwater" unless their grain is cut down. According to President Henry C. Mervin of the organization, owners should also be sure their horses get plenty of bran.

ROB CAMBRIDGE SAFE OF $465

The safe in the office of Aiken Speare & Sons' oil plant at No. 166 Sixth street, East Cambridge, was robbed of $465 in cash and a quantity of securities, the police were informed today.

Obtaining entrance to the office in some unexplained manner, thieves knocked off the dial of the safe and made away with the cash and negotiable securities. Three strong boxes containing other securities were found in a nearby field by Mary Glass, fourteen, of No. 13 Bristol street, on her way to school.

80 AMERICANS IN WAR PERIL

Peking, April 15 (I.N.S.).—Eighty American teachers and children are refugees in the basement of a schoolhouse at Tung Chow over which bullets of two clashing Chinese armies were whizzing today.

American marines are ready to leave Peking in a motor truck if the situation becomes serious.

Tung Chow is 14 miles from Peking and is being contended for by the people's army, which now holds Peking, and the besieging army of General Wu Pei Fu.

OREGON INDIANS ON DRUNKEN RAMPAGE

White Residents in Danger as the Result of Recent Court Decision

Klamath Falls, Ore., Apr. 15 (A.P.) Klamath Indians at Beatty and Bly, two reservation towns in Oregon, are on a rampage, drinking, gambling and carousing, and fear is felt for the safety of white residents in the district.

Local, state and county peace officers are powerless to cope with the situation, the outgrowth of a recent decision by Circuit Judge A. L. Leavitt, in a habeas corpus action, holding that Indians on the reservation are not under the jurisdiction of state and county laws.

Judge Leavitt's decision holds that the Indians are wards of the government, protected by treaty and immune from arrest by anyone but United States officials so long as they remain on the reservation.

District Attorney Elliott said that if the demonstrations continued he would be forced to ask for Federal officers from Portland or that local peace officers be empowered to act as United States deputies.

100 CHILDREN QUIZZED IN POSTOFFICE THEFT

Brockton, April 15.—More than 100 school children in the various public schools of Brockton have been questioned by local police and postoffice employes in connection with looting of a lock box on Crescent street. It is estimated that over $40,000 in checks to the Home National Bank was scattered around the floor in the lobby of the postoffice when the robbery was discovered.

HERO PENSION BILL FILED IN HOUSE

humane and philanthropic motives. It seeks to remove from the pale of charity the families of men who meet death as the result of duty and valor and save their widows and children the humiliation of being forced to depend upon public funds and contributions.

WELCOME NEWS.

Announcement of the proposed act was welcomed in police and fire circles throughout the State. Consensus of opinion was that there has been crying need for such form of aid for years.

The bill was drafted at the request of and after a conference which Representatives Thomas and Casey held with the managing editor of the Boston Evening American. This newspaper pledges its full and unqualified support in its news and editorial columns.

The Casey-Thomas bill would amend Section 90-A of Chapter 32 of the General Laws. It reads:

"In recognition of faithful and meritorious services and for the purpose of promoting the public safety and welfare, a city or town which accepts the provisions of this act may by a vote of the city council in the case of a city and by a vote of the selectmen in the case of a town, pay to the widow of a member of the police force or fire department killed in the performance of his duties, an amount not exceeding the salary that the deceased would have received had he lived, so long as the widow shall live and so long as she remains unmarried.

"On the death of the widow, or on her remarriage, said payments to her shall cease; but such payments not exceeding the total amount that the deceased would have received in any one year shall be made annually to a guardian for the benefit of any child or children of the deceased up to the time said child or each of said children reaches the age of sixteen, as said city council or said selectmen may determine by proper votes in each respective case. If there are minor children but no widow to their use, or if there are no children to the use of the next of kin if depending upon such deceased person for support.

DEPENDENTS CLAUSE.

The latter clause provides for aged mothers or invalid or minor sisters or brothers of whom the policeman or fireman killed may have been the sole support.

The family of practically every policeman or fireman who meets death by violence illustrates the necessity for such legislation. Heads of large families, their pay does not enable them to save much if anything for a rainy day, with the result that when death suddenly takes them their dependents are invariably subjects for public relief.

The most recent instance was the murder of Patrolman Frank Comeau, an overseas veteran attached to Fields Corner station. Comeau, fearless and efficient, fell in the line of duty while intercepting three bandits. A benefit had to be held for his widow and two little daughters.

The Casey-Thomas bill would provide for such a family.

MOVIE AUDIENCE CALM DURING FIRE IN BLOCK

Five hundred persons sat calmly through a movie show at the Hyde Park Theatre unaware of a fire in the block. At no time was the theatre endangered. The firemen kept the damage down to $1500.

The lower floor of the building was occupied by Jacob Goldberg as an auto supply store, Thomas Hickey and family lived on the second floor. They were at the movies.

'TRICK' CANS IN COP'S HOME; 2 ARRESTED

Augusta, Me., April 15.—Rocco Russo and Tony Lembarco came here from Boston separately, meeting at the Maine Central station, where they decided to hire a room. Unfortunately for the young visitors from the big city, they selected the home of Police Officer Bert Bowker, whose wife has remarkably keen hearing.

Mrs. Bowker, made suspicious by the sound of sundry gurglings and rattlings emanating from the room of the pair, searched it during their absence and found a number of contraband cans. She notified the police and her husband was sent to the house with Officer Wentworth.

They arrested the two men. The cans were found to be nearly full of water, but a two-inch tin tube, holding six ounces of alcohol, had been soldered in the mouth of each. A prospective customer, suspicious of the honesty of the bootleggers and but to sample each can, and finding real alky, would complete the purchase.

Russo, who manifested an honest pride in the invention for which he claimed the credit, insisted, however, that he planned to sell the cans empty. Lembarco testified he was a casual acquaintance of Russo and knew nothing of his plans.

SOCIETY PLANS ANNIVERSARY

A formal dinner and dance, marking the tenth anniversary of Ypostal, the Young People's Society affiliated with Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue, will take place in the temple vestry next Wednesday evening, April 21.

No lengthy speeches are scheduled for the night's program, just an extensive list of entertaining novelties and features. Mark Hamburger, Kenneth Roman and Frances Biller are on the committee.

In connection with the Ypostal celebration, Rabbi Harry Levi will preach a special sermon Sunday, April 25, to be known as "Youth's Service." Young people will speak from the pulpit and will read the Bible passages of the morning. They will also assist the adult corps of ushers at the service.

NICE ESPIONAGE PLOTS STIR FRENCH SENSATION

Nice, France, April 15 (A.)—The arrest of two Frenchmen here as alleged spies has created great excitement, the belief being common that the case is of greater importance than was thought at first.

It is reported that further action is imminent since it has developed that the arrests has resulted in the connection of a dozen prominent residents of Nice with the espionage charges. Allegations made here that persons in Italy have been buying police, military and naval secrets of various French departments has created two factions in Nice, one avowedly hostile to the Mussolini government and the other friendly to it.

HAPPY ENDING IN NEXT GISH PICTURE

Blanche Sweet Will Play Lead in Nellan's "Diplomacy"; Other Film World News

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS, Universal Service Motion Picture Editor.

Los Angeles, April 15.—Lillian Gish, who has remained steadfast in her devotion to heroines who either die in the final chapter or suffer a fate worse than death, will abandon the unhappy endings.

John Colton, who dramatized "Rain," and "The Shanghai Gesture," has been handed the assignment of writing an original story for Miss Gish without the tearful finish. The picture will probably follow "Annie Laurie," her next starring vehicle.

Marshall Nellan's S O S last week for a leading woman for "Diplomacy" has borne fruit. Blanche Sweet has agreed to play the English heroine in Victor Sardou's play for her best pal and severest critic, Gunay Von Seffferts has been engaged for the heavy, Harold Griebe has designed the sets and Benjamin Glazer has adapted the scenario for "Diplomacy."

The first definite step taken by Warner Brothers to produce pictures abroad was made this week when it was decided to film a German story in Berlin. Jack Warner will go abroad to boss the job and the emissary is already there getting studio accommodations.

Another director to be brought to this country by Warners is Michael Courtice of Vienna, who directed "The Moon of Israel," which will be released by Paramount and which, we are told, is in the class with "The Ten Commandments."

The eastbound train, last Tuesday might have been a convention-bound special, there were so many film men aboard. Richard Rowland, with a silver trowel in his pocket specially designed for him after he turned the first spade for the new studios at Burbank; Adolph Zukor, Allen Dwan, Jack Pickford, Buster Collier, Herbert Lubin, S. L. Rothapfel and the hundreds of studio folk who came to bid this crowd farewell, made it look as if a film meeting would be called.

Just before Allen Dwan said goodbye, he whispered to me that he will direct Thomas Meighan's new picture, "A Tin God," a story by William Anthony McGuire.

Buster Collier said he was leaving for New York to visit his father and mother and to take a vacation. Everyone says that Young Collier is pretty much cut up over Constance Talmadge's marriage.

Jack Pickford will see a few shows and probably pay a visit to his wife, Marilynn Miller.

While we are on the subject of the Pickfords, I am glad to announce that Lottie Pickford Forest, who was at the station, said the latest word from her mother is that she is improving. Mrs. Forest will sail for Europe May 19 to join her mother in Aix Les Bains.

So many people have been asking about Elinor Glyn's plans in the movies that I took it upon myself to ask her. She says she is now heartwhole and fancy free as far as contracts are concerned, having finished her last picture with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which by the by, ended her contract with them.

Mrs. Glyn will go to some quiet place the next few weeks to write a novel for the Hearst publications. What name do you think she will use? "It." The hero will be an American business man born in the Bowery, 45 years old, and ugly.

Doctors Have Prescribed It For Over 33 Years

IF you feel the need of a good general tonic, it seems but natural to use a tonic which has been and is today being prescribed by thousands of doctors. Physicians for over 33 years have been prescribing Gude's Pepto-Mangan as a quick and efficient tonic. Its prompt tonic power has been abundantly demonstrated by hundreds of careful blood tests at the hands of experts. It is entirely different from the myriads of unscientific preparations and "tonics" which physicians know to be of little practical value.

Prescribe Gude's Pepto-Mangan for yourself TODAY and watch the results. Your druggist has it in both liquid and tablet form.

What Doctors Write:

"I have used Gude's Pepto-Mangan for several years and think it the best of its kind."

"I found its use very satisfactory and am prescribing it now right along."

"I have been using Gude's Pepto-Mangan in my practice for 10 years or more with the best results. I have found it the best form of iron I have ever used. The weakest or most irritable stomach bears it perfectly."

"Find Gude's Pepto-Mangan most excellent. Prescribe it almost exclusively."

WARNING

There is only one Pepto-Mangan, that is Gude's Pepto-Mangan.

DUKE FORMS COMPANY TO RUN HIS ESTATES

London, April 15 (A.P.).—The Duke of Rutland, like many of his fellow peers, has formed a public company to take over the ownership and management of his great estates, including the famous Welbeck Abbey, one of the finest country seats in England. The company is capitalized at about $4,000,000. The Duke of Rutland himself is the governing director. In taking this action the duke has followed the example of the Dukes of Marlborough, Grafton and Buccleuch, who formed companies to promote the enormous taxation landowners now have to pay.

PLAN FATHERS' DAY AT B. C. ON MONDAY

First Event of Kind Will Be Observed at the Heights; Catholic News of Hub

By JAMES WALSH.

Next Monday will be observed as Fathers' Day at Boston College, University Heights. A memorial mass for deceased fathers of the students will be celebrated at 9 a. m. At 1 o'clock the paternal heads of the boys' families will come together in the assembly hall prior to an inspection of the college buildings.

At 2 o'clock a baseball game will be played between the B. C. team and Fordham. At 5:30 p. m. there will be benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament. Supper will be served in the assembly hall at 6. The addresses will be delivered by the Very Rev. James H. Dolan, S. J., president of the college; the Rev. Patrick J. McHugh, vice-president and dean; Congressman James A. Gallivan, and former Congressman John A. Sullivan. The affair will be the first Fathers' Day to be held at the college. The committee in charge of the affair includes John E. Dorsey, chairman; George Roberts, Gregory Collins, William Duffy, Stephen Kobalinski and John Clinton.

Members of the Cathedral Young Men's Catholic Association will have their twenty-eighth annual ball at the State Theatre Ballroom, Massachusetts avenue, tomorrow night. A concert from 8 to 9 p. m. will precede the dance. The Rev. William B. Foley is the director of the association. The invited guests include United States Senator William M. Butler, Governor Fuller, Mayor Nichols, former United States Senator David I. Walsh, and many other prominent men. A special committee of ladies who are assisting in the arrangements includes:

Eleanore Dalley, Alberta R. Large congregations attended the novena to St. Theresa, "The Little Flower of the Child Jesus," which opened in SS. Peter and Paul's Church, Broadway, South Boston, last night. The devotional exercises consisted of the singing of hymns written in the saint's honor, the recitation of the special prayers of the novena, a sermon on St. Theresa and Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament.

Great throngs also crowded the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Harrison avenue and East Concord street, last night, when a Holy Hour service under the patronage of St. Theresa was held at 7:45 o'clock. This service will be held every Wednesday evening and will be conducted by the Rev. Joseph J. Daley, S. J.

David I. Goldstein, secretary of the Catholic Truth Guild of Boston, will be the speaker at the Common Cause Forum in Franklin Union Hall, Berkeley and Appleton streets, South End, on Sunday evening. His subject will be, "The Drive Against Religion in Mexico." A musical program will precede the lecture. Discussion by speakers in the audience will begin at 9. The public is invited.

The annual memorial mass for deceased members of St. Francis Court, No. 4, Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, will be celebrated in the Mission Church, Roxbury, at 10 o'clock Monday morning. Chief Ranger Thomas B. Kenney is chairman of the committee. Others on the committee are Carl Eggersheim, Ambrose J. Woods, Thomas F. Haley, Peter A. Welsh, Charles W. Bradley, James J. Fitzgerald and James J. Manning.

NORGE, BAFFLED BY FOGS, ASKS WAY ON RADIO

Big Polar Airship Seeks Wireless Aid to Steer a Course for Russia

Stockholm, Sweden, April 15 (A.P.)—The airship Norge established communication by wireless with the Vaxholm station, near Stockholm, early today. She reported she had entered a zone of mist extending across almost the whole country.

The commander could not tell his position, but said he thought the direction he was taking was correct.

The message asked Stockholm to request other wireless stations to endeavor to get in connection with the Norge with a view to giving her compass bearings.

The Norge passed Tross, which is about 60 miles from Stockholm, about an hour after he had established wireless communication with the Vaxholm station.

Big Dirigible Heads for Leningrad Through Fog

Oslo, Norway, April 15 (A.P.).—Flying eastward over Sweden, across the Baltic Sea and over the Gulf of Finland, the Ammundsen-Ellsworth polar expedition airship Norge was on her way to Leningrad today. The airship cut loose from the mooring mast at 1:10 a. m. for an additional 600-mile trip through the air to Soviet Russia.

THREE U. S. WIVES ARE ASKING PARIS DIVORCES

Paris, April 15 (I.N.S.).—Mrs. Ella M. De Peyster Shoemaker Schwartz of New York, has filed a petition for a divorce from Morton L. Schwartz. They were married in New York, Feb. 18, 1915.

Mme. Charles De Bonneseet, the former Miss Eleanor Hernlon Steele, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Steele of New York, has filed a petition for a divorce from Dr. De Bonneset, a French citizen. Mme. De Bonneset, who was previously divorced from Count De Lazreze, married Dr. De Bonneset in Paris, Nov. 29, 1920. The father of Mme. Bonneset is connected with Morgan & Co.

Mrs. Sophie Dellar Silverman has asked for a divorce from her husband, Silas Paul Silverman. They were married in New York, Feb. 9, 1925. She charges desertion.

BERWICK

Berwickians
by
Neal O'Hara

These are fat days for us comical writers. Will Rogers is indorsing Bull Durham in the magazine ads. Irvin Cobb is boosting the brand of cigarettes that you ask dad about. And what they write is literature.

They say that Rogers, just for plugging that particular tobacco, gets $4 a word. That is some stipend for any writer to knock off.

For $4 a word I'd indorse seidlits powders.

For $4 a word I'd try to improve Lincoln's Gettysburg address.

But I am getting much less than that for putting in a good word for Berwick Cakes.

I don't know what Cobb drags down for O. K.-ing Sweet Caps. But if he's worth his weight in gold as an indorser he is getting a million dollars. Because Cobb weighs 295 pounds.

Both boys are getting plenty, however, for saying nice things about their favorite smoking tobacco.

But here is where I've got it on them. I eat the product I indorse.

That's more than Cobb or Rogers can say.
—NEAL O'HARA.

STARS HELP TO CHEER VETS IN HOSPITAL

"Captain Jinks" Principals on Program Given by Boston Evening American

An entertainment of unusual merit was offered the boys at the United States Veterans' Hospital, West Roxbury, today by the Boston Evening American. It was one of the regular semi-monthly shows under the auspices of this newspaper, in its effort to cheer the men who took part in the "big parade" and are still incapacitated.

Chief among the entertainers were three of the principals of "Captain Jinks," now playing to crowded houses at Shubert Theatre. Gus Shy, the comedian, Louis Templeman, leading man, and Nina Olivette, who plays opposite Shy, were present to chase the "hospital blues" away.

Assisted by Miss Olivette, Shy put on an original skit which created no end of laughter. He also sang his famous "Oh, How I Hate Women," one of the hits of "Captain Jinks." Miss Olivette also appeared in other numbers.

Mr. Templeman, whose clear baritone voice is so much praised by all critics after his rendition of "Fond of You" and "The Only One," two of the musical hits of "Captain Jinks," sang a series of tuneful selections.

In addition, Lambert's snappy 12-piece orchestra which plays tri-weekly at the Oak Ballroom in the new Hotel Colonial, Massachusetts avenue and Norway street, Back Bay, contributed many numbers, ranging from jazz in the most syncopated fashion, to operatic selections.

"The Mara Kiddies" also appeared. They performed in a manner to delight the ear and eye. This group included Mary Russell, Genevieve Sawyer, "Bubbles" and Lorraine Thoman, Marion and Grace Cadigan.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Young Riders Put Thoroughbreds Through Their Paces While Elders Applaud at the New Riding Club

THOROUGHBRED HORSE-FLESH went through its paces at the New Riding Club's invitation show before a crowded and applauding gallery—with all the favorites in the ring, "Rempstone," from the Almy stables, the Reginald Bird trio of "Chocolates" and Miss Alice Stuart's "Pride of Kildare" and "Blue Fern."

MISS MIRIAM WINSLOW rode her "Tip Top" and "Mimi" in several classes. Miss Elizabeth Sprague's "Scarlet Rambler," Miss Cornelia Clark's "Diamond" and Miss Beatrice Howell's "Skylark" added to the gay picture of prancing horses and smart, youthful riders.

QUITE THE HAPPIEST rider of the evening, and one of the youngest, was Miss Anna C. Danforth, who carried off the blue ribbon in the Saddle Horse Class, much to the delight of her fond parents. She was riding her sister's (Miss Marjorie Danforth) horse, "My Boy."

MRS. GARDINER H. FISKE, that always ardent and talented rider, and owner of many blue ribboners, made her usual striking ring appearance. Likewise Miss Betty Bird, and Miss Miriam Winslow, whose change from informal whipcord to the formal broadcloth and "topper" gave variety to the picture.

J. DUDLEY CLARK, himself a noted sportsman and one of the finest polo players this country has ever known, was an interested spectator, spending most of the evening close at the ringside, where his daughter, Cornelia Clark, made frequent appearances.

ALL THE WORLD of society that loves fine horseflesh was there—naturally, Mrs. Robert Brayton Almy, the former Rosamond Adie (one of the finest of women riders hereabouts), was on hand. She was very charming in frock of rose and wrap and chapeau of golden brown.

PETITE AND charming Mrs. George S. West, with Mr. West, viewed the tanbark vista from vantage points in the gallery. Mrs. West wore a smart coat wrap of tan and sang hat in "gigolo" lines.

LIKEWISE IN the gallery, where admiring friends and parents were crowded for a fine view of the ring, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Woods had places. Mrs. Woods, the former Priscilla Pollard, wore a most becoming wrap of caracul and trig chapeau of black.

MR. AND MRS. Sidney M. Winslow, Jr., Mrs. Winslow wearing a brilliant vermilion hat and wrap of black, watched the show. The Sprague family, aside from Miss Elizabeth Sprague in the ring, was represented by that youthful matron, Mrs. Phineas Shaw Sprague, erstwhile Lucy Carnegie.

MISS THEODORA AYER, who rides this evening in a heat team of three with Miss Elizabeth Sprague and Miss Cornelia Clark, watched the opening show from the stand overlooking the ringside. She is one of Younger Set's most accomplished riders, always making a handsome appearance atop a horse.

ANOTHER BLUE-RIBBONER of the Younger Set, Miss Elisabeth Stewart, was in riding togs for the occasion. Miss Stewart, faithful follower of the various meets, may always be counted on to carry on a ribbon whenever she enters her horses.

THIS EVENING the second half of the show goes on—commencing with Junior Jumpers. Then there is the Ladies' Saddle Class; Middle and Heavy Weight Hunters; Road Hacks; the Touch and Go class; Park Hacks; Hunters; and the Hunt Teams.

ALL THE FAVORITES will be in the ring again—Miss Dorothy Preston's "Southern Rose," Mrs. Homer Loring's "Volcano," Miss Miriam Winslow's "Mimi," and Mrs. Nathaniel Farwell Ayers' "Goodman" and "Goodwill." Mrs. Ayer returns from a brief New York stay for the show.

A VERY DISTINGUISHED company of friends and relatives come from Baltimore for the marriage, on Saturday next, of Miss Mary Vinton Murray and Major Ross Whistler in Emmanuel Church. Both the bride and groom have a notable family connection in the Maryland centre.

MAJOR WHISTLER entertained for his entourage on Saturday last, staging this jolly farewell-to-bachelor days at the Fly Club. For Miss Murray there is no formal entertaining, but jolly small and entirely informal affairs with her girl intimates in the hostess roles.

A WEDDING JOURNEY spent abroad is the pleasant plan. And very soon after the bride and bridegroom sail away for Europe the elder Murrays depart also for one of their frequent trips to the other side.

THE STEAMSHIP DEGRASSE, sailing away today for French ports, has aboard Mr. and Mrs. Stuart B. Kaiser of Cambridge. Other passengers are Mrs. Nelson Curtis, Jr., and Mrs. Vassar Pierce, two young matrons of Milton.

GOING OVER for the briefest of journeys, these last named will be away but a scant four weeks. Mrs. Curtis was Miss Virginia Pierce, and Mrs. Pierce was Miss Dagmar Ladenmack. Without doubt these chic matrons will bring back the latest thing in feminine adornment from the Rue de la Paix.

Betty Alden

Photographs especially posed for the Boston Evening American.

Miss Constance Greco, on "Town Talk," was one of the hits of the horse show opener at the New Riding Club.

The horsemanship of Miss Dorothy Preston, who rode "Southern Belle," won the applause of the gallery.

Miss Miriam Winslow, riding "Tip Top," was much admired for the dextrous way she handled her mount.

INVISIBILITY WAS REAL AIM, MACREADY SAYS

New Haven, Ct., April 15 (A.P.)—The establishment of a record is merely a secondary purpose of an altitude flight, according to Lieutenant John A. Macready, airman who recently resigned from the army service.

Macready, himself a former holder of the world's record for altitude flying, recently attempted to break the present mark of 39,689 feet held by Lieutenant Callizo of France. He expresses his views in an interview appearing in the Yale Daily News today.

The main object of an altitude flight, Lieutenant Macready says, is to develop planes which will operate satisfactorily at a height which will render them invisible from the ground and enable them to swoop down on enemy planes from higher altitudes.

TODAY the HOTEL KENMORE welcomes you to Boston's newest and finest hotel. Ideally located, luxuriously appointed and superbly serviced—the Kenmore ranks with the notable hotels of Chicago and New York. Yet rates are moderate for the superior accommodations it affords.

The Kenmore is an investment of many million dollars, to make your Boston visits more enjoyable. The stately, fireproof French Renaissance building overlooks Charles River and Fenway Park. Away from the noise of the down-town district—yet the leading department stores, smart shops, theatres, schools and colleges are but a five-minute ride from our door.

Four hundred rooms—each an outside room; spacious, sunny and cheery. Four hundred baths—each snowy-tiled; equipped with shower and tub. Panelled walls; deep, soft rugs; twin beds; writing-desks. And such unusual features as circulating ice-water, bed-head lamps—and the morning paper at your door.

More than a hotel—the Kenmore is a brilliant criterion of New England hospitality. To know its charm, to enjoy its comfort, to experience the personal touch of its courteous service, is to make it your home when in Boston for business or pleasure.

THE Main Lounge is artistic yet home-like. The magnificent Empire Dining-Room affords cuisine and service of the highest type. The cozy Coffee Room is a favored rendezvous for breakfast, luncheon and afternoon tea. And the Crystal Ballroom is New England's most attractive social suite.

'Miss Telephone'

"Miss Telephone" was the title bestowed upon Miss Helen T. Page of No. 316 Dudley street, Roxbury, at a dance held by the Beach Operators at the Oak Ball Room. She was declared the most beautiful girl in attendance.

GIRLS WINNERS AT S. S. PIERCE DANCE

Pretty girls in the employ of the S. S. Pierce Company go about their work today proudly wearing wrist watches, pins, and other delightful novelties, all won in the different competitions in the costume ball of the S. S. Pierce Employes' Association at Whitney Hall, Brookline.

Some won prizes for the prettiest costumes in the colorful parade, while others were sufficiently expert at whist to win the honors.

More than 400 were masked and in costume, while some 300 more watched and applauded or played whist.

ACCOUNTS OF TRUST COMPANY TO BE MOVED

Accounts of 10,717 former Massachusetts Trust Company depositors will be transferred from No. 55 Federal street to the Atlantic National banking rooms at No. 10 Postoffice square. Since the Massachusetts Trust was taken over by the Atlantic National, the accounts have been kept at No. 55 Federal street.

CHURCH WOMAN FAVORS CHILD AID BILL

Miss Katherine P. Hewens Says Federal Measure Is Sound Policy

Miss Katherine P. Hewins, general secretary of the Church Home Society, today enthusiastically indorsed House bill 7,669, which provides Federal aid for dependent children in the District of Columbia.

"The principle is sound and humane," said Miss Hewins. "It is the coming policy. Already approximately forty States have adopted such a law. A similar law was passed in Massachusetts in 1912 and it is working splendidly. Every effort should be made to keep children under the home influence, even if relatives have to care for them.

"I sincerely hope it will become law in the District of Columbia, which must depend on Congress for legislation. Most Congressmen are so busy framing laws for their own States that the District of Columbia is often apt to be somewhat neglected." The mothers of the District of Columbia and the nation are entitled to such aid in adversity."

YELLOWSTONE PARK OPENS JUNE 18

John Colter, an intrepid frontiersman and a member of the Lewis and Clark expedition, was the first white man to behold any part of what is now Yellowstone Park. In 1807, after being wounded in a battle between Crow and Blackfeet Indians, he journeyed across the park from Jackson Hole to Tower Falls and carried the first accounts to civilization. Jim Bridger, famous guide, and J. L. Meek, a trapper and pioneer, were there about 1829. W. A. Ferris, of the American Fur Company, visited the geysers in 1834 and wrote the first published account of them.

Today the park is the same as when John Colter discovered it, with the exception of splendid highways, a system of trails to less accessible places and several fine hotels and camps.

Besides the unique variety of natural wonders, geysers, boiling hot springs, colored terraces, odd rock formations, tinted pools, waterfalls, lakes, mountains and canyons—the Yellowstone National Park has the greatest and best game preserve in North America.

Some of the wild animals have become used to tourists and will make friends—the "hold-up bear," who begs from the park guests, for instance; others roam in the distance within plain view but keeping apart through shyness; still others are so wild that tourists must leave the beaten paths to see them.

The grizzly, or silver-tip bear, the black bear and his cinnamon brother, buffalo, prong-horned antelopes, big horn sheep, American elk, deer, (black-tailed and white-tailed), otters, mink, ermine, martens, badgers, beavers, porcupines and other smaller animals all live protected in the wilderness of the Yellowstone.

There is really no place in the world like this great American National Park.

If you are interested in Yellowstone National Park, send five cents in stamps to the Boston Evening American Hotel & Travel Bureau, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, to cover mailing of literature

Opening Dates for National Parks

Announcement is made by P. S. Eustis, passenger traffic manager of the Burlington Route, of the official opening of the following parks: Rocky Mountain National Park in Colorado, June 1st; Glacier National Park, June 15th; Yellowstone National Park, June 18th. He also announces through train service on the Burlington to all three of these playgrounds effective with the opening dates.

U. S. OBSERVES 150 YEAR AS NATION

The Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition and Celebration is to be held in Philadelphia June 1 to December 1, 1926, is to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the adoption and signing of the Declaration of Independence by the Continental Congress in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, July 4, 1776.

The President of the United States has honored the occasion by accepting an invitation to be present in Philadelphia on July 3 and 4, thus emphasizing the great national patriotic exhibition.

The underlying note is that of thanksgiving for 150 years of freedom. The story, the opening chapters of struggle and the closing chapters of achievement, will be set forth in pageantry and parade.

The exposition grounds are located in South Philadelphia immediately north of the United States Navy Yard at League Island and are easily accessible from all parts of the city. Transit facilities are under competent direction.

In case you wish to know more about, or are interested in attending, this Exposition, write the Boston American Hotel & Travel Bureau, No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, for descriptive leaflet.

GIRL SCOUTS TO VISIT HUB

The International Girl Scouts and Girl Guides numbering approximately 100 representing thirty-nine foreign countries, will leave New York for Boston by way of the Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., on May 8, to attend the International Council of Girls Scouts and Guides which will open in Boston the following day.

The delegates represent nearly all the larger and several of the smaller countries including delegates from Japan and Russia. Mrs. Mark Kerr of London, chairman of the International Council, will have charge of the party.

Upon arrival in Boston they will camp for three days at Cedar Hill, after which they will participate in the joint rally of the International organization, the Massachusetts Girls' Scouts and the Boston Girls' Scouts, which will mark the close of the convention.

AUTO DETOUR FEATURES CROSS-COUNTRY TRIP

The new Indian-detour by Harvey-car offers to passengers on Santa Fe eastbound and westbound transcontinental trains, the California Limited and the Navajo, a glorious three-day motor outing through the storied heart of the Indo-Spanish Southwest, under ideal conditions and as a part of the trans-continental rail journey.

Passengers on westbound trains, The California Limited, and the Navajo, may detrain at Las Vegas, in New Mexico, where the Castaneda station hotel, under Fred Harvey management is located. There the Indian-detour motor cars—or Harveycars—in charge of specially trained couriers leave direct from the hotel every day the year 'round. Passengers on The Navajo will rejoin their train at Albuquerque the evening of the third day.

EASTERN S. S. CO. TO BOOM NEW ENGLAND

It is reported that the Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., will this year enter upon a broad program of exploiting the attractions and advantages of the ports and of the territories adjacent to them, served by these lines.

The plan will be presented to all agents and representatives of the Eastern Steamship lines at a general sales convention to be held in Boston tomorrow, Friday, April 16, with topics pertinent to the industry under discussion.

In the evening the third session and association dinner will take place. William S. MacColl, president, will act as toastmaster, and the speaker will be Theodore H. Price, of New York, editor of Commerce and Finance.

MILL METHODS DEMONSTRATED TO STUDENTS

Two trick loads of students, one from Bradford Academy in Bradford, and the other from Everett, were entertained at the International Textile Exposition in Mechanics Building, and accompanied by their teachers were taken on a personally conducted tour about the building, following which they wandered at will, inspecting the machinery in action.

Representatives from larger mills and factories are beginning to arrive and with their arrival, the exhibitors are enjoying an excellent business.

There was a liberal sprinkling of laymen among the spectators This indicates the interest that the public is beginning to take in trying to understand how cloth is made, said one of the officials A larger crowd is expected tomorrow and the next day.

Many representatives from the Canadian textile centers are at the show and many more are expected today and tomorrow. The attendance of buyers from foreign centers is larger than it has been at any previous exhibition held by the Textile Exhibitors' Association.

Tomorrow is expected to be the climax of the week when the big meeting of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers will be held at the Copley Plaza. An open forum and business session will be held

Friends Over 70 Shingle Roof at Lynn

Friends of George Keene, of No. 64 Sachem street, Lynn, are not men to let their associate go unassisted.

Mr. Keene, who is 70, was discovered by two of his friends shingling his roof. So his friends climbed up to help him, and they finished the job.

The friends who helped in the work were Frank Briley, 71, and Edward Thompson, 71. Thus the combined ages of the men on the roof was 212 years.

U. S. HEARING TO B. & M. MEN

Four men suspended from work at the Billerica car shops of the Boston & Maine railroad on the ground that they made false representation of working conditions there to commissioners of the United States Department of Labor will be granted a hearing in a few days and their fellow-workers are confident that they will be reinstated.

At the hearing before the railroad officials the men will be represented by T. H. Cronin, vice-president of the American Federation of Railroad Workers, which organization the suspended men recently joined

M'KINLEY LOST BY 110,000

Chicago, Ill., April 15 (A.P.)—With more than a million votes accounted for in all but approximately 100 of the Illinois 6,963 precincts, Senator Frank L. Smith today had a majority over Senator William B. McKinley for the Republican nomination for United States senator by more than 110,000 votes.

Senator Smith's plurality was piled up in the face of announcements by Governor Len Small and Chairman Adolph Kent of the Republican state committee that the latest returns indicated the majority would be cut to 75,000 votes or less.

Governor Small declared that he would not be "stampeded" by the Smith victory claims and would withhold his decision as to whether he would call a special session of the legislature to name a successor to Senator Deneen until the official count was completed.

Chairman Kent declared that the Smith majority would be cut to 75,000 votes or less when the official count was completed.

Col. Frank L. Smith defeated Senator William B. McKinley, the incumbent, for the Republican nomination in Illinois by more than 110,000 votes. McKinley's defeat was considered a repudiation of his vote for the World Court. I. N. R. Photo

FOR Sour Stomach PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Hereafter instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly

BETTER THAN SODA

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this sour waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

TRY A 25c BOTTLE

Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty-cent bottles, any druggists.

The Letters of Queen Victoria

Revealing the Appealing Private Documents of the World's Greatest Woman Ruler

A Paper That Goes Into the Home, Dependable, Fearless, Entertaining and Instructive

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

BOSTON, THURSDAY MORN'G, [illegible]

SECOND SECTION

CHILDREN PICKETING WHITE HOUSE

Thousands Thrilled as Northern Lights Rule Sky

"Dear, gentle, Alix knelt before me. I kissed her again and again," writes Queen Victoria of the girl who married Bertie, her son, and afterwards became Edward's Queen. This picture by R. Lauchert shows Alexandra as she was of her marriage.

TODAY'S instalment of "The Letters of Queen Victoria," which the Boston Evening American is publishing daily by authority of King George of England, contains the famous woman monarch's own description of the wedding of her first son, Albert Edward ("Bertie"), to the beautiful Princess Alexandra ("Alix") of Denmark. And all the world knows that this bridal pair lived to reign over the British Empire as King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra.

Especially touching is the Queen's description of the pretty tributes of homage, love and devotion shown to the silent spectator in widow's weeds by the leading actors in the colorful drama. Standing out in her memory is the sight of "dear Vicky," her oldest daughter, Victoria, wife of the Crown Prince of Prussia, "leading little William," now the exiled former Emperor of Germany, in the wedding procession

Extracts from the Queen's Journal

"Bustle and Agitation"

WINDSOR CASTLE, 7th March, 1863.—Bustle and agitation everywhere. The preparations in London and all over the country quite wonderful.

Bertie came to wish me good bye at half past 9, on his way to Gravesend (for the white festivals), and was a good deal agitated.

From quarter to 6, waited with all our daughters and little William (now ex-Kaiser) in my room, our four sons having gone to Slough to meet the train.

In pouring rain the carriages and escort were seen coming.

I went down nearly to the bottom of the staircase, and Bertie appeared, leading dear Alix, looking like a rose. I embraced her warmly, and with her parents, Augustenburg (Alexandra's sister), the two sons, Thyra and Waldemar, went upstairs.

I went back to my room desolate and sad. It seemed so dreadful that all this must take place—strangers arrive, and he, my beloved one, not be there!

When I was waiting Vicky returned and was sitting with me dressed for dinner, when dear gentle Alix knocked at the door, peeped in, and came and knelt before me with that sweet, loving expression which spoke volumes. I was much moved and kissed her again and again.

She said the crowd in London had been quite fearful, and the enthusiasm very great, no end of decorations, etc., but the crush in the City had been quite alarming. Bertie came in for a moment whilst Alix was there

"Seems Like a Dream"

10th March—All is over and this (to me) most trying day is past, as a dream. Here I sit lonely and desolate, who so need love and tenderness, while our two daughters have each their loving husbands, and Bertie has taken his lovely, pure, sweet Bride to Osborne, such a jewel whom he is

QUEEN'S COUNSEL

by Queen of Rumania

FRIENDLINESS GOES FAR—Part 2

OF COURSE, it could not be true that an old gypsy woman had met the Queen face to face [illegible] perhaps might have been, but that she had STOLEN to her bed actually bought a piece of hot chocolate and said it was good—no, no, that could not be!

But the dark-faced old crone kept repeating her story again and again and again did she tell it in detail till her employers began to wonder if after all there might be some truth in it.

In those days the Regina Maria chocolate manufactory was a modest affair, so modest indeed that it had known nothing of its existence. Now its heads of this humble little business came together and talked:

"Shall we?" "Dare we?" "Would she mind?" "Is it worth while?" and so on.

Some were of this opinion, some of another. But the long and short of it was that a huge, magnificent box of chocolate "fit for a queen" was got ready and with it enormously pompous letter relating the story of the old gypsy, daring to hope it was true and that Her Majesty would deign to accept it, etc.

By Majesty deigned to accept, confirmed the old woman's tale, and [illegible] Well, that was the beginning of many things.

From that day forward, the Regina Maria chocolate manufactory prospered and grew inconceivably. So well did it grow, in fact, that it was [illegible] a year later to come and lay a foundation stone for a new building to be added to the old.

That was but the first step. Many others followed, and now the factory is amongst the first in the land. All because the Queen and an old gypsy woman in bad met in the public gardens face to face.

The date of that important event became the day which the manufactory celebrated as THEIR day, the gypsy was pensioned, and all welfare work in the shop was done in Regina Maria's name.

Queens are still miracle workers, then, you see, even in these ultra prosaic days.

I hope to think of the little episode as illustrating how far a small friendly act can go and the many benefits that follow, like ripples widening and widening round a pebble thrown into a lake.

STRIKERS IN APPEAL TO COOLIDGE

Passaic Mill Workers Also Start Picketing of Governor's Home

Washington, April 15 (A.P.).—Children of the textile strikers at Passaic, N. J., appeared at the White House today to picket the grounds as a protest against conditions they said existed at Passaic. The delegation, including six children from four to twelve years of age, marched into the White House grounds with placards, but were told these could not be displayed under the regulations. The leaders of the picketers were received by Secretary Sanders, who said he could see no warrant for action by the President. He referred them to the Labor Department.

Passaic, N. J., April 15 (A.P.).—Appeals to President Coolidge and Governor Moore of this State, through the picketing of children, were planned today by leaders of the striking textile workers in the fight against what they contend is an oppression of their rights by enforcement of the riot act regulations.

The addition of Topper to the Red Sox infield will make the Fohls' pastime considerably more interesting, as there's anything to cope and figures. For example: The New Yorkers came to the village, after winning sixteen straight ball games. Their pitching in a long series with the Dodgers was something to rave about. This series with Boston was looked on as a sort of a joy ride—four soft games and the good old fishing start.

SMITH FACES MITCHELL IN "BANDBOX"

Philadelphia, Pa., April 15 (Wide) — Until Pitcher Jack Quinn, the Yankees' ace, was [illegible] the trade that sent Jimmy Ring to the Giants made the deal in a [illegible] different light. Ring was the reason the Boston Braves took first on the chin for the second straight day.

Manny's boys were able to garner only four hits during the course of the pastiming and this [illegible] was not enough to put together a victory in face of the fact that Pitcher Hethering fell on Pitchers We [illegible] and Jarhan [illegible] [illegible] was which accounted for 10 runs.

The quartet of Boston blows were served in succession by Brun, Bill [illegible] Taylor and Johnston.

Ehrets started for Philadelphia and he lasted five and a third innings during which stretch he yielded 11 hits. When he was relieved from the [illegible] Rixey, the Phillies were [illegible] to one tally, who got a base bow, and that ended Mr. Ryan Gallagher was then inserted, and he finished.

Smith for the Braves and Mitchell for the Phils are the pitching selections for today.

SURPRISES RULE IN BIG WHEEL CONFLICTS

American League baseball battles provided the features on the second day of the season, although Wayland Dean, youthful right-hander sent to the Phillies by the Giants, allowed the Boston Nationals only four hits.

The Red Sox and Yankees continued their tremendous slugging, but at the end the tables of the previous day's three-hour tussle had been reversed.

At the same time the veteran Stanley Coveleskie, pitching for the Washington Senators, held in check the powerful Philadelphia Athletics as Walter Johnson had done on Tuesday.

The Chicago Cubs made nine hits count for as many runs, while the Cincinnati Reds could count only twice on thirteen safe blows. Carl Mays, veteran submarine ball artist, was knocked out of the box.

At St. Louis the world champion pirates turned on the Cardinals and gained a 10 to 3 verdict with Kremer pitching excellently. Hornsby of the Cardinals, who had a perfect day at bat on Tuesday, was unable to solve Kremer.

With a right-hander opposing them the Giants used their sticks to good effect against Brooklyn and won, 9 to 5. Ring, with the Phillies last year, pitched steadily after a shaky start for McGraw's team. A homer by shortstop Jackson of the Giants, the first in New York this season was a feature.

Jenkins to Aid in Tuohey Show

Tom Jenkins, wrestling instructor at West Point, whom George Tuohey took from the Aetna rolling mills in Cleveland and developed into a world's catch as catch-can champion, has written to his former manager for a place on the program at the Arena next Wednesday night.

"I am in such good shape working with this bunch of huskies up here," writes the one time title holder, "that I feel that I can even take on some of the stars of the day. But I would like nothing better than a whirl at Dan McLeod, who was my toughest opponent, if he is not able to get him. We are about the same age and as I understand that Dan is wrestling instructor at the Los Angeles A. C., the chances are that he is in as good shape as I am and capable of showing the present generation of fans what the old timers could and still can do. I will consider it an honor to appear if a place can be found for me on the bill."

BILLY MURPHY FIT FOR BROWN BOUT

Billy Murphy of Lowell, who meets Harry Kid Brown in a return battle tomorrow night at the Worcester A. A., has finished up hard training and after he jumped off the scales the junior lightweight champion of New England weighed 134 pounds. He will do a little light work in the gym today, punch the bag a few rounds, skip rope and shadow box for a few rounds. Being in the well known pink is one of the most essential things in a boxer's life today.

Lacrosse has its big day in these parts when the Harvard lacrosse team meets the combined Oxford-Cambridge lacrosse twelve at the Harvard stadium this afternoon. The game will get under way at four o'clock.

The Britons, whose teams are in the shape and a little more so than for the [illegible] that is expected.

The Britons arrived in town this morning and after a breakfast at the Harvard Club went to Harvard square to view the college buildings and the historic points about Cambridge.

Captain Jack Mellard was accompanied by fifteen men and declared his fellow players to be in excellent condition.

Coach Irving Lydecker, although he has been somewhat handicapped by inclement weather, looks for a certain victory from Captain Reed and his Crimson jerseyed players. The Britons have met in leading teams in the South and have fared rather well, considering that at no one time did they have their entire starting lineup intact.

Dr. F. T. Adams, one of the best defenses in the old Indian game, and this is expected to aid in the first line defense. The defense to the heavy obstacles that Harvard will have to overcome this afternoon.

Coach Lydecker of Harvard has inserted several football men into his lineup and while body-checking game is sure to feature. Madison Sayles and Ernie Camache, in addition to Charlie Gills, are important factors in the Harvard football team this fall. With the exception of the football players, Coach Lydecker, an old Syracuse University star, has made up the rest of his twelve from veterans who have played for the Crimson in previous years.

Stenroos Sends Marathon Entry

Aben Stenroos of Finland, the Olympic marathon champion, will compete in the B. A. A. marathon Monday. The signed entry bank of the famous Finn has been received by Manager Tom Kanaly and adds much attraction to the race.

Along with the Stenroos entry comes word that six other athletes have joined the field, bringing the total to 98. Joseph J. Amuzzi, of the Hyde Park Athletic Association, Charles Peterson of Boston, Ralph Smith of the Dorchester A. C., Alfred G. Crowell of Boston, Thomas McHugh from the Illinois A. C. club and Robert Noakes of the Gladstone A. C., Toronto are the newcomers.

HARVARD TRACK TEAM WILL TRAIN IN SOUTH

Coach Eddie Farrell has selected his Harvard varsity track team that will train in Williamsburg, Va., at William & Mary College this Spring. It also was announced by Captain Tibbetts would not compete in the speedy two-mile run at the Penn relays in Philadelphia.

The athletes who will make the trip will leave the Hub next Saturday afternoon. The list includes the following Crimson speed artists:

100 and 220-yard dashes—Hall, H. B. Park, G. T. Randell, A. Allen and Wyman; 440—Hall, Wyman, Park, Myers and Randell; 880—Myers, Hall, Wyman and Randell; mile—Wyman, Myers, Hall and Randell; two-mile—Myers, Wyman, Randell and Hall; high jump—Charles Sweeney, B. Cary, Ralph Bradley, Jr., and Ralph Bancroft; broad jump—Sweeney, Bradley, Jr., and Manner; shot-put—Sweeney, Kirby and Edmund Burke Stoddard; hammer throw—Sweeney, Kirby and Pratt.

COMPSTON WINS MATCH IN A RAINSTORM

Roehampton, Eng., April 15 (A.P.)—Match play in the Roehampton Club annual $1,000 invitation competition started today with miserable weather, a driving rain and a strong head wind making the play on the outward journey exceedingly difficult.

Archibald Compston quickly attained himself to the English weather after his American trip, defeated George Gadd, the Roehampton Club's "pro," 5 and 4. Abe Mitchell, the man upon whom British eyes are focused for the restoration of Great Britain's supremacy in the ancient game, beat James Okenden of Hankerbill, 3 and 1.

Jack Smith defeated Harry Varden, one time champion, 6 up and 5 to go. J. H. Taylor defeated Arthur Havers, former British open champion, 3 and 2. Major George Duncan, another notable beat Rowan Hatcher, 4 and 3. W. Augustus Bowden defeated T. G. Read after a battle that went to the 20th hole.

Abdey Boomer the French winner of the competition last year, who was the only foreigner to qualify in yesterday's rounds, kept up his winning play, defeating T. Williamson, 4 and 3.

W. H. Smith defeated Len Holland who won sixteenth qualifying place yesterday, 8 and 6.

Rickard Offers to Buy Contract of Jack Dempsey

New York, April 15 (I.N.S.)—Following several conferences between Tex Rickard and Jack Kearns, a report became current today that the promoter had offered to pay Kearns a flat sum to cancel his interest in Dempsey's contract, in order to leave the champion free to sign for matches in defense of his title.

It is understood that Dempsey has declined to accept offers until the old contract expires legally. Then Kearns would be eligible to receive his numerical cut on any matches made while the document is in effect.

Meanwhile, Paddy Mullins was expected to reach a decision today as to the future services of Harry Wills, this being the day on which Floyd Fitzsimmons must produce the $10,000 promise money to bind Jim Dempsey-Wills match or the contract will be void.

MUNN-LEWIS MAT BOUT LURES RECORD CROWD

BOTH SURE OF TAKING WIN END

Behemoths of Grappling Game Clash in Title Elimination; Great Prelims

WRESTLING MENU TONIGHT

Strangler Lewis, Chicago, vs. Wayne (Big) Munn, Kansas City, best two falls out of three to a finish.

Leone Labriola, Italy, vs. Alex Lunden, Sweden.

Stanley Stasiak, Poland, vs. Big Bill Beth, Oklahoma.

Ned McGuire, Boston, vs. Frank Yusko, Boston.

They Don't Agree

ED (STRANGLER) LEWIS

"Munn is a big, powerful fellow, but I know too much about the fine points of wrestling for him. I shall toss him tonight with a headlock and then be ready for Malcewicz or Stecher."

WAYNE (BIG) MUNN

"I pinned Strangler Lewis' shoulders to the canvas with a crotch hold followed by a body slam at Kansas City a year ago last January and I shall do the same thing again tonight."

By JACK CONWAY.

THERE will be a record crowd on hand when Strangler Lewis and Wayne (Big) Munn battle in their finish mat bout, best two falls out of three, at the Boston Arena tonight.

Jack Conway

Promoter Paul Bowser stated early this afternoon that the advance sale had shattered all marks set so far this season. He asserted that there are flat fans here from all parts of New England eager to see Lewis and Munn in their titanic struggle for supremacy.

Munn and Lewis, both of whom are in this city, did not engage in any strenuous exercises today as they wished to be well rested when they are called to the centre of the ring tonight.

Toots Mondt informed Bowser today that he was willing to cash with the winner.

Big Munn is one of the few men who have ever defeated Lewis. He pinned the Strangler's shoulders to the mat when they clashed at Kansas City a year ago last January.

Lewis was defeated by Munn's favorite crotch hold followed by a body slam. Munn's tremendous strength enables him to lift the average wrestler in his arms much like he would a baby. He elevated his opponent to a point two to three feet above his own head and there crashes him to the canvas with mighty force.

THE preliminary bouts are certain to produce action. Leone Labriola and Alex Lunden are well matched and should step at a lively clip. Stanley Stasiack will also encounter some worthy opposition when he mingles with Big Bill Beth, while Ned McGuire and Frank Yusko should produce some fireworks.

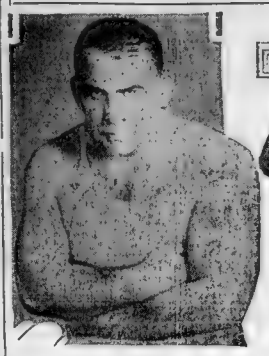
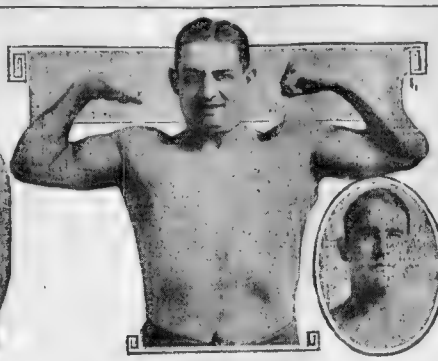
MAT STARS READY TO GRAPPLE FOR WORLD'S TITLE



STRANGLER LEWIS

Who claims the world's heavyweight wrestling title. "Strangler" is a harmless looking sort of person when not defending his laurels, as photo in inset shows, but on the mat he appears as dodged above and is not a very pleasant sight, you will agree.



BIG WAYNE MUNN

Who is the champion's persistent and dangerous challenger. Munn is aptly termed the "Man Mountain." Note the extraordinary development of his chest, arms, shoulders and muscles in the above photo. On the right he is shown squaring off at the start of a match. In a beauty contest Wayne would have little trouble beating the "Strangler," but on the mat he will have a tough time downing the champ.

SCHAEFFER HAS FOUGHT WAY TO TOP

Red Chapman's onward march toward the featherweight crown will be put to the acid test on April 22 at Mechanics Building where the sorrel top gladiator will mingle with Herbie Schaeffer, one of the best featherweights in the Middle West. Schaeffer has won popular newspaper decisions over Chick Suggs, Carl Tremaine, Bud Taylor, Eddie Shea, Doc Schell, Pal Moore, Eddie O'Dowd, Ernie Gooseman and a clean cut win over Charlie Phil Rosenberg, the present world's bantamweight champion.

Herbie Schaeffer of Chicago has had one of the most spectacular careers in the history of the ball game. Born and raised of Irish parents on Chicago's great South Side, Herbie had ample opportunity to use his fists.

Needing money as an early age to help support the family and wandering into an amateur club near the stockyards one evening, Herbie grasped at a chance to substitute for one of the boys who took sick at the last moment.

From that minute, Herbie began to carve a niche in the Windy City's fistic life.

GERMAN MERMEN SAIL FOR HOME IN TRIUMPH

New York, April 15 (A.P.)—Eric Rademacher and Gustav Forelich, German swimming champions, have sailed for home after impressing America with their ability.

Rademacher, the breast stroke star, has been outstanding in his accomplishments in several races in various cities of the United States while little Froelich, although left behind several times, has not been out of the running.

McCoy "Bulled" Stewart

JIM STEWART lost to Kid McCoy in a six-round go at the National Club on Twenty-fourth street on October 16, 1908.

Jim lost his goat and then the fight. With everything but past performances in his favor, Stewart, who outweighed the foxy Kid by forty pounds, ran backward twenty-two miles around that ring.

Poor Jim was in a bad place. He had three master goat-getters against him, and what they did to him was a caution.

While resting in his dressing room just before the battle, Harry Pollok, manager of McCoy, sent a doctor to Jim's room to see whether the latter was sick or not.

He said that he heard Jim was weak at the stomach and he needed assistance. Jim threw the doctor out and then began to worry some.

When the gloves were being put on Jack O'Brien, who seconded McCoy, went over to Stewart and asked him whether he had his life insured or not. He told Jim that McCoy was the wickedest hitter alive and didn't care what he did as long as he won. Jim's eyes popped out at the news and he bit his lips some.

REFEREE CHARLEY WHITE gave them instructions and told them to break at his order and not hit after he had called for a clean break. McCoy then grabbed Stewart around the neck and, jerking it down with a snap, cracked White if it was fair to hold a man like that and whale away. Of course, White said "No," and Jim went to his corner trying to get the hitch out of his neck.

Well, by the time the gong sounded Stewart was so frightened that he might have fainted if Jimmy DeForest hadn't whispered a few kind words in his ear.

The very first time Stewart led at McCoy he started to dance away across the ring, and Jack McAuliffe, who sat near Tom Shaikley, turned and said:

"Tom, he leads at McCoy and then runs away. Did you notice it?"

"Well," replied the Tar, "outside of that he is a pretty good fighter, isn't he?"

That was the story of the fight. Stewart wasn't anxious to bump against the Kid's left and the latter was not the most anxious man in the world about a fast pace. McCoy was there, but never to fight from bell to bell without a stop. He never could have done it, and if Stewart had adopted rushing tactics he might have made a name.

THEY hadn't gone half a minute in the first round before McCoy feinted with his left to the stomach and then brought that old corkscrew up on the jaw.

Stewart went down like a ton of brick and was so frightened that he looked twice at his corner before getting up. McCoy stood over him with that famous sneer on his face. He looked as though he was saying, "Hurry up and get up, boy, I want to peddle a few more before my license runs out."

Jim got up and broke all records getting to another corner. He was thoroughly beaten then and never led again without dancing five feet away with every lick. He was bigger, younger, heavier and stronger than McCoy, but that sneer was the barbed wire fence that kept him at bay.

THE Kid danced around the big fellow, feinting with that left, dancing this way and that, and stalling to the Queen's taste. Stewart had weathered that punch and wasn't anxious to tackle another. McCoy wasn't sure just how far he could go, and wasn't wasting any more punches than he could afford.

This was the best round of the fight. There was nothing to the thing at all after that excepting the perfect stalling of the Kid and the distance which Mr. Stewart kept.

McCoy tried many a good left and right, but they all went high or wild, never hitting the spot. He banged Stewart's right eye almost shut but never had him in danger again.

McCoy took a few dives himself, but he usually copped the big fellow and if he didn't, threw another scare into him that kept Jim at a safe distance while he grabbed another little rest.

Every round of the go was McCoy's, with the possible exception of the fifth, and that we might call an even one, because in that Stewart slapped the Kid twice on the mouth while the latter was coming in and his friends tore off an awful cheer up in the back gallery.

New Haven, April 15—Irene, Every of Ithaca, N. Y., was elected captain of the Yale fencing team for next year at a meeting of the members of this year's team. Eve was one of the Yale's stars in the foils this year and took second place in the intercollegiate championship meet recently.

ALBEMARLE G. C. ALL SET FOR BANNER YEAR

By BILL GRIMES.

Despite the unfavorable weather of the past month, the Albemarle golf club is in as good, if not better condition than any course in these parts. The fairways are dry and fairly fast for this season of the year and the regular greens, on which play will not be allowed until next Monday, look wonderfully inviting.

Bill Grimes

This will be Albemarle's second year as an 18-hole [illegible]. The new holes were opened last season but as many of the new greens and some of the old ones were Winter killed, the members had few opportunities to play the regular greens.

Since the course was enlarged to 18 holes, Albemarle has a fine golf club. It is possible to get in a variety of golf at the West Newton course, such as enjoyed by but few clubs in this section. Especially is this true of the new nines on the other side of the road.

ROADS IN GREAT SHAPE FOR MARATHON

By STED CHANDLER

The historic course over which the Boston Athletic Association's twenty-ninth annual Marathon will be run is in better shape than ever this year. The roads are in an unusually good condition, so the athletes need not worry in that score.

As for the polling [illegible] may rest assured that every effort has been made to make this run the most efficient of all. There should be no delays in traffic jams nothing to fear from stray drivers. With the co-operation of the State constabulary and of the police in each town through which the runners pass, everything will be done to make life easy for those who find enjoyment in running twenty-six miles.

With the entry list approaching a hundred, virtually all there is to do now is to watch for the century mark to be reached.

When tobaccos are good enough to speak for themselves —let them say it!

THAT'S the one way to give men what they want in a cigarette—natural tobacco taste. Each type of tobacco should contribute—one its spicy tang, one its rich aroma, one its mellow "body," one its mild sweetness; and if the quality is right and the blend is right, that's all there is to it.

Sounds easy!

But to create a blend that combines fullness with mildness; that removes heaviness while retaining "character"; that makes a cigarette that is smooth and mild yet "satisfying"—to do all this is not easy, far from it.

It is so difficult, in fact, that millions of smokers sincerely believe it has been achieved in only one blend in the world.

This blend—and they swear by it—belongs to Chesterfield. It embodies the finest of Turkish and American tobaccos — and it can't be copied.

STUDY BUDGET ITEMS WITH CARE

Boston Evening American Offers Aid to Housewives in Planning Expenditures of Income

By MARTHA LEE.
No. Twenty-seven.

"I HAVE received the budget form, but wish you would tell me exactly what goes under the different headings."

This sentence forms such a large part of so many letters that today is a good time to answer all these questions at one time.

Firstly, under savings should take 10 per cent. of most incomes, come deposits in the savings bank, co-operative bank, life insurance, securities and strangely enough the income tax. (I think the statisticians put income tax under this heading because they don't know where else to put it.)

Your food allowance, which usually takes 25 per cent. of the total family income, covers groceries, eggs, milk, meat, vegetables, fruits and all meals taken outside the home. Your budget will allow you 15 per cent. of your income for clothing for the family and includes material for clothing, all ready-made clothing as well as bills for cleaning and repairs.

Twenty per cent. of your income may be apportioned for shelter. This includes rent, or, if you own your home, the interest on your mortgage, taxes on the home, husband's carfare to business, fire insurance on the home and repairs to the house.

Operating gets 18 per cent. and this includes water tax if you have one, all service, fire and burglar insurance cost, wood, gas, electricity, small household supplies under $1, laundry, telephone, repair and replacement of household equipment, small incidentals such as express, postage, etc.

Under personal, which gets 7 per cent., goes church and club dues, magazine and newspaper subscriptions, tuition, personal allowance (spending money for the family), the expenses of pleasure automobile, including garage, license, registration, automobile running expenses and repairs, candy, amusements, dinners, carfare, etc., dental and medical bills, personal gifts, outside laundering for the boys and personal indulgences such as candy, tobacco, flowers, etc.

There is the story, and I think it answers 99 per cent. of the questions that come in every day. If you haven't started a budget, why not fill out the coupon today and learn where all those runaway dollars are going?

I'll gladly help you with any of your special problems.

Write or Print Very Plainly

Home Budget Editor: My husband gives me $30 per week and there are three in family. Rent is $35 a month.

Is $30 a week the whole family income? If so, rent with is too high unless it includes heat. If you husband keeps out much or sum for himself, take the income as a whole, and budget on that.

Mrs. W. P. N. writes for a budget for $70 a week, three in family. She is right across door Mrs. N. h. from your letter I judge you are a good manager, and you can strain your income if anybody can! Say, $12.50 (insurance), shelter, $15; food, $8; clothing, $2.50; operating, $3; personal, $1.25.

Home Budget Editor: We pay $50 a week rent. Which income for heat and gas. My husband makes $70 a week. He has a car but to keep one as he is a sales man. We have been married three months, but don't seem to save.

MRS. R. M.

Congratulations on your good sense, dear M. M., in starting your married life on a budget! You do not say whether your husband gets any expenses for his car out of his business. If not, I would include the running expenses in operating and personal—the latter only what you use it for pleasure. Try this budget: Saving, $5; shelter, $10.50; food, $15; clothing, $5; operating, $4, personal, $4.

Court Secrets in Letters of Victoria indeed lucky to have obtained. How I pray God may ever bless them!

Oh! what I suffered in the Chapel, where all that was joy, pride and happiness on January 25th '58 when Princess Victoria was married to Crown Prince Frederick William, afterward Emperor Frederick III of Prussia), was repeated without the principal figure of all, the guardian angel of the family, being there.

But now I must return to the beginning of the day. Directly after breakfast went over to the State Rooms, to embrace darling Alix, and give her my blessing. Her mother was much affected. Went with her into Alix's bedroom, where she was in her dressing-gown, and very emotioned. Then I went back to my room and could see from my windows all the crowds of people assembling and arriving.

Cold from nervousness and agitation, I dressed, wearing my weeds, but a silk gown with crape. A long veil to my cap, and, for the first time since December, '61, the ribbon, star and badge of the Order of the Garter, the latter being one my beloved one had worn, also the Victoria and Albert Order, on which I have had dearest Albert's head put above mine, and a brooch containing a miniature of him, set round with diamonds, which I have worn ever since '40.

Drove with the Duchess of Sutherland (Mistress of the Robes) and Jane Churchill (Lady of the Bedchamber). We started from the usual door, going on to the North Terrace, where we got out and went through a covered way down the small stairs, quite quiet by, up into the Deanery. A guard of honor was mounted in the quadrangle. We waited a short while in the Deanery, and then went along a covered way prepared over the leads, which brought us into the Royal Closet

"Like Scene in a Play"

When I stepped up to the window, the chapel full of smartly dressed people, the Knights of the Garter in their robes, the waving banners, the beautiful window, altar and reredos to my beloved one's memory, with the bells ringing outside, quite had the effect of a scene in a play.

Sat down feeling strange and bewildered. When the procession entered to the playing of the March in Athalie, and after Aunt (Duchess of) Cambridge, Mary (her daughter, afterward Duchess of Teck and mother of the present Queen Mary) and our five fatherless children (the three girls and two little boys) came into view, the latter evidently well in a violet (at Vicky's wedding they walked before, behind and near me), I felt terribly overcome.

I could not take my eyes off precious little baby (Princess Beatrice), with her golden hair and large mourning, and smiled at her as she made a beautiful curtsey. Everyone bowed to me. I quite overlooked Alix coming in, looking extremely well in a violet dress, covered with her wedding lace, and a *v*ion velvet train, from the shoulders trimmed with the *n*ativer beloved Mama had worn at Vicky's wedding. Louis (Prince Louis of Hesse, husband of Princess Alice) in the Garter robes leading her.

Last came dear Vicky (leading little William), in a white satin dress trimmed with ermine, etc. When she caught sight of me, coming up the Choir, she made a very low curtsey, with an inexpressible look of love and respect, which had a most touching effect.

Sounding of Trumpets

There was a pause, and then the trumpets sounded again, and our boy, supported by Letest (Queen Victoria's brother-in-law, Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha) and Fritz (Crown Prince Frederick William of Prussia, afterward Emperor Frederick III), all in Garter robes, entered; Bertie looking pale and nervous. He bowed to me, and during the long wait for his Bride kept constantly looking up at me, with an anxious, clinging look, which touched me much.

At length she appeared, the band playing Handel's Processional March, with her eight Bridesmaids, looking very lovely. She was trembling and very pale. Dearest Alberta Claude was there, which affected me much, and then the service proceeded.

When it was over, the young couple looked up at me, and I gave them an affectionate nod and

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By Helen Rowland

TWO thoughts cannot occupy the same man's mind at the same time—unless they happen to be a blonde and a brunette.

It's hard to persuade a husband to learn to dance; but it's wonder ful how quickly a widower can pick up the new dance steps after shuffling along in the lock-step of matrimony for so many years.

WHAT A WIFE KNOWS.

How do I know that the Spring is coming?

Not by the sweet in the air, my dear!

Not by the blue in the melting sky—

But, by the LIGHT in my darling's eye!

By his longing look and his wistful mien,

As he gazes out toward the rolling "green"—

By the sudden glint in his roving eye

As he watches the girls go tripping by!

How do I know that the year's at Spring?

Not by the wild birds on the wing—

But, oh, I can tell when the Spring is nigh,

By the WANDERLUST in my Darling's eye!

"The Temptress" -:- By Ibanez

"The Temptress" is to be filmed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as a special Cosmopolitan production.

CELINDA dismounted in a grove of olives where a second horse, the same one she had ridden that morning with a cross saddle, was waiting for her. Dropping her skirt and the rest of her feminine costume, she stood revealed in knickerbockers, riding boots, and a boyish skirt and necktie. She smiled as she thought of how she was disobeying her father.

But how surprised that other man would be to see her in a feminine riding skirt. No, she didn't want to surprise him that way. He had always seen her in boy's clothes and so he always treated her with the friendly confidence he would have for moments of his own sex. Who could tell what would happen were he to see her wearing skirts. Just like a young lady? He might grow shy and begin being tremendously polite, and finally stop seeing her altogether.

Celinda rode along the river bank to a point where she outlined the iron profiles of several great derricks, and the tin or straw roofs of a settlement. It was a little town that had grown up near the dam.

Celinda rode toward a handsome young man who sat at a small table studying charts.

"It's such a long time since we've seen one another," cried Celinda.

The youth looked his astonishment and exclaimed:

"Such a long time! Why, what about this morning?"

"Well, what of it, you ungrateful gringo?" she said. "Is it such a small matter to you that we haven't seen one another since this morning?"

Then they both burst out laughing like two children.

Majestically she offered him her hand.

"Don't be ill-bred, Mr. Watson! That is for you to kiss. You seem to be losing all your manners out in this desert!"

Amused by the girl's mock gravity, the young engineer bent over her hand. But his air of treating her with the good-natured condescension an older person displays toward a mischievous child annoyed her.

"ONE of these days I'm going to get really cross with you, and then you'll never see me again. You always treat me as though I were a little girl, when I'm not! I'm the first lady of the land, I'm the Princess Flor de Rio Negro!"

But Watson was still laughing at her; and finally the girl laughed too, whereupon, the Princess Flor began exhibiting a serious and maternal interest in her friend's welfare.

"You are working too hard, and I don't like to see you so tired, gringo mio! There's too much work here for one man to do. When is Robledo going to come back? Is he having a gay time over there in Paris?"

Watson, as she mentioned his partner's name, caught up her serious tone. He was already back, the engineer replied, and might put in an appearance at any moment. As to the work, it didn't seem so heavy to him.

They were moving along side by side now, unconsciously going toward the smithearing camp. Richard, as he walked along, kept a hand on her horse's neck, as she rode, and looked up at Celinda, whose quick motions of her eyes and lips while she talked were often easier for him to understand than her rapidly uttered words.

The camp, a medley of strangely assorted buildings, scattered about without any attempt at order, contained adobe huts covered with straw, houses of brick with tin roofs, tents of dirty canvas, and, most comfortable of the lot, the portable houses occupied by the engineers, overseers and other employes.

Above all the other houses, one in particular stood out, a wooden building mounted on piles, with a porch running around all four sides. It was the bungalow that, a few weeks before, had been received at Bahia Blanca for Pirovani, the Italian contractor of the works at the dam.

A frame house, the only one that, in size, compared with the bungalow of the Italian contractor, was the goal of the slowly moving crowd. Above the door was a sign on which was written in ordinary longhand, "The Gaucho's Resort." The publicity was, as a matter of fact, an Andalusian, but it is the prevailing assumption in those regions that any Spaniard who comes to Argentina must by that fact be a Gaucho.

"The Resort," of course, was chiefly useful to the community as a saloon, but it also served as a store where the most diverse articles could be purchased.

The Making of a Husband

By Ann Lisle

PAT stared at me curiously. I returned the stare. The blood pounded in my head as I waited for his answer.

"Yes, Jim sent me," Pat said at last.

"Jim sent you to intercede for him—to try to get me to accept your standards—the standards that drove Jeanie to the brink of danger, if not of hysterics!"

Pat Dalton straightened up lazily. He gazed around the room to which I had fled for shelter when Jim said I came to the brink of a polish and sank down in the living room of The Birches.

"Are you meaning—did Jim take me by the scruff of the neck and be asking me some way to send me plead his cause?" Pat's slow, musical voice asked at last.

"Don't be sarcastic," I protested.

"And why not? The yourself that is ironical and bitter. Is a man to be honeyed all the time?" Pat asked. "'Tis tired Jim may get of listening to the sharp words that take all the sweetness out of the kind things you are after doing, Alanna. 'Twas not always like this you were!"

"Life and men made me like this," I muttered. "I have to have some kind of protective armor."

"Yes—that you do!" Pat agreed, astonishingly enough. "And I wouldn't begrudge you the right kind."

"Meaning that you think it would be perfectly all right to pay Jim off in his own coin and philander a bit of my own?" I sniffed.

"Perhaps," Pat agreed. "'Twas that brought me right about face with my plans."

"You are confessing that you value her the more because another values her?"

"Yes. Why not? Is there no law of supply and demand in this world of ours, Alanna?"

"You're not decent. You are saying that a man owns more for his wife when he finds that another man—"

"Admires her," Pat finished quietly. "There's no great moral to draw from that, Alanna. But 'tis how we are."

"You mean you love Jeanie more because you think that someone else cares for her?" I asked, my voice rising on a strident note of outraged decency.

"I don't mean that at all, Alanna, as you are after knowing very well," Pat said with a surly note in his voice. "But 'tis to tell you what I do mean that I came up here after I had gone down to The Studio and found Jim sunk in the sixty deepest pit that overtakes a man when he is deep in the realizing of the fact that he doesn't at all understand the woman he loves. 'Tis because I saw that Jim had no idea what was wrong I sent Jeanie out to cook the dinner for the four of us, and decided that I'd come up here and be setting you straight——"

"I must go down and help Jeanie!" I cried.

"I'm no 'must' there is. 'Tis no duty you have at all just now save the duty you owe yourself."

"And that's to listen to your highly moral views of love?" I asked.

"'Tis a fine way you have of putting yourself so in the wrong that a man would be after feeling sorry for you! Jim's sunned on it's heel and left you—fat." Pat said insolently.

"No one is keeping you," I replied. "I've tried to keep Jim and you are talking. Though 'tis how you sound," Pat laughed. "But seeing that I do not have to be listening, and seeing that I love you the truest and I was ever contracting, 'tis myself will not listen to your words at all, Alanna, but will be thinking of the causes behind them. And 'tis of your first mistake I want to be telling you again. Don't be after getting sour 'tis after getting sweet.

Fashions and Fancies

By Mildred Ash

DOWN South in Dixie originated the brightly colored cotton bandana, which inspired the silk kerchief scarf that is worn draped about the neck in typical bandana manner. With a strictly tailored suit or coat-dress this bit of neck wear is the very latest touch for Spring.

Crisp and fresh are the silk boutonnieres, with bunches of orchids. These little bouquets add the feminining touch to the mannish tailormades that are the accepted vogue for street wear.

Spring proves a vestige of Spring's coat fashions, for some of the smartest straightline models have the collarless neckline vests of contrasting shade of kasha to match their kasha linings, which are richly embroidered in the same colorings as decorate the vests.

Spring aprightliness is gaily expressed by the brightly flowered lingerie and negligees that are so much newer than those of solid pastel tones. Of flowered crepe de china, pussy willow taffeta or georgette crepe, trimmed in lace or crepe net, these little garments are most alluring.

How Rinso saves me money on washday

I USED to buy all sorts of things to get the wash clean and white—bar soaps, chipped soaps, washing powders.

But since I discovered Rinso, I've been using nothing else. Not only does it save my strength, but it saves me money because it's the only soap I need.

The heavy Rinso package is filled with the compact Rinso grains that dissolve so quickly, work out the dirt and stains, and get the wash snowy white—without a bit of hard rubbing!

And I don't need to waste gas under a boiler, because Rinso soaking whitens better than boiling—and sterilizes, too!

A PIRATE of HEARTS

By BEATRICE BURTON

Author of "GILDED KISSES"

The Thrilling Love Story of a Boston Girl and the Husband Who Strayed

CHAPTER XLIV.

(Copyright, 1916, Johnson Features, Inc.)

SEVERAL couples near the table were starting curiously at Elsie, now, as she leaned close to Ranny, blowing cigarette smoke playfully into his eyes. He kept blowing it back at her, his mouth all but touching hers every now and then.

Sylvia thought she had never seen anything so disgusting in her life, never!

Suddenly she pushed her chair back from the table.

"Let's go, Peter," she said to him. "I can't sit here a second longer. I shouldn't have come! Above all, I shouldn't have asked you to sit here with her." She was all agog.

"Where do you think you're going —you two?" Ranny's voice stopped them.

"Peter's going to take me home. I'm getting a little nervous about the baby." Sylvia tried to smile as she spoke.

"You sit down!" Ranny said with command in his voice. "Wink can beat it if he wants to. But you stay here 'til I go, see? So just drop your anchor."

It wasn't until then that Sylvia saw that he had been drinking before he met her, but she saw it plainly now—saw it in the flush that had risen to his lean cheek and in the sullen glitter of his dark eyes.

She sat down quietly. It was the only thing to do.

Peter True Blue

Peter looked at her for a minute. Then he dropped into his chair be side her.

I think I was a dull man company that evening.

Almost the moment they were alone Peter began to tell her some passionate stories of his love for Sylvia, of himself, of his faith. His eyes were cool and soft and wet.

An hour later Sylvia and Peter stood on the sidewalk outside the Westminster and watched Ranny's roadster carry him and Elsie Lee pokl away.

Sylvia climbed wearily into Peter's car and sat beside him without saying a word all the way back to The Nest.

He left her at her door with a short "good night."

"I won't be over again if I can help it," Peter groaned.

For a full year he kept that promise.

Sylvia forgot all about Peter the minute she left him.

Wrapped in her own dark thoughts about Ranny, she ran up the stairs to The Nest.

Mrs Pigeon met her at the door. Her plump, old face was creased with worry.

"The baby's been real sick since you left Mis' Phelps," she said and Sylvia's heart seemed to stop.

She gave the old woman one wild look and rushed into the tiny room where the baby slept. Her little face, always waxen white, was flushed now with a high fever. His breath was coming short and quick.

Sylvia flew to the telephone and called first Dr. Buzzard and then

Aunt Agony

When Dr. Buzzard arrived Junior was out of his head, and he whimpered in a voice like a sick little animal's cry. The very sound of it was torture to Sylvia.

She blamed herself for going away and leaving him for three hours. Queer, that feeling she had had, that she shouldn't leave him.

"Nonsense!" Dr. Buzzard snapped out at her when she began to reproach herself for her selfishness. "I hasten get these fevers in a minute and get over them just as quick. A tooth may cause a fever, but in Junior's case I think it is just a cold on his chest. Not much of a cold either."

When Aunt Agony arrived he scared away with a cheerful "Good night to you."

At the door he bumped into Ranny, who was stupidly trying to find the key-hole.

As the doctor passed him, he straightened up and opened his mouth to speak to him.

But the doctor went straight down the stairs without so much as a look at him. He had no earthly use for Randall Phelps since the night when Junior was born—the night when Ranny had not come home until dawn.

"What's th' matter? Baby sick?" Ranny asked, as he took off his coat in the hall, and put out his light. His voice was to it and it seemed hard for him to talk clearly.

Sylvia wished that there was some way of getting him off to bed without letting Aunt Agony see him in this state.

But Aunt Agony was all primed for him and for a moment he was frightened by a pounced upon him.

Ranny Dodges

"Hush," she shouted. "so you're here! 'Better late than never,' eh? Well, you're a fine one, aren't you?"

She looked him up and down with a blighting look. "A fine time you were having with that trollop hanging to your arm this afternoon while your wife was home nursing a sick baby! What do you mean by such actions, eh?"

"I don't know what you're talking about," he said, without looking at her. "If you mean that I was with Miss Leopold this afternoon, I admit that I was with her. Sylvia and I had dinner with her unknown to you night, and you might tell your friend, Sarah Wilk, that her brother is a dog, too."

Aunt Agony's eyebrows almost climbed into her hair with surprise.

"Is that true, Sylvia?" she asked. She didn't take Ranny's word on anything.

Sylvia nodded.

Suddenly she didn't care whether Ranny was in love with Elsie Leopold or not. She didn't care whether she told the truth to Aunt Agony or to anybody else.

Nothing mattered very much to her just now but the little baby in his feathering so loudly—the baby she had brought here from Ranny's, her spirit and Ranny's.

"Oh, I don't think he's going to die!" she asked piteously of Aunt Agony and threw herself on that narrow, hard breast with a half smothered sob.

But it was Ranny who answered her.

"Of course, he's not going to die! Control yourself, Sylvia," he said, gruffly. "You're just nervous, that's all. Better come to bed."

When she woke up it was light.

The baby was not so feverish as he had been, and he was in what Aunt Agony called "a beautiful sleep" when she tiptoed in to look at him.

"Your husband just left for the office," she added bitterly. "I suppose he didn't want to see me again this morning! Well, it doesn't hurt my feelings a bit to have him out of the house, not a bit!"

At 9 o'clock Ranny telephoned. "I left my watch and a lot of important papers on my chiffonier,' he told Sylvia. "Get a cab and bring 'em right down to the office, will you?"

Sylvia tore herself away from the baby and went. To leave the tiny thing was almost like leaving part of herself behind her in the house, he seemed so much a part of her.

She found Ranny in his father's old office.

He looked very fine and important sitting behind the broad mahogany desk, when she went in. He was talking over the telephone, and he put one hand over the mouthpiece and whispered to her to sit down.

Sylvia sank into the chair beside his desk, and it was then that she noticed for the first time that a girl sat at another desk in the corner.

She looked up and grinned at Sylvia with teeth that were startlingly white in her brown face—the brown, gipsy sh face of Elsie Leopold.

"Why, whatever are you doing here?" Sylvia found herself asking, before she knew that the words were out of her mouth.

For Elsie seemed very much at home, here in Ranny's office! Her hat and coat hung on the hook behind her, and there was a potted flower on her desk.

She laughed outright at Sylvia's question. "Now, looky here, don't you start to be jealous of me!" she said in her broadest brazen way. "Your husband is simply letting me use this desk for an hour or so every day until I get my own shop, so don't misunderstand the thing."

Sylvia gave her a long, still look from those deep eyes of hers. It was a look that made the girl at the desk feel guilty and common and cheap, all at once—a look that made her blush under her thick layers of make-up.

"No, I don't misunderstand anything," said Sylvia, turning away. "I think I understand some things too well."

She said Ranny's watch and papers on his desk. As she went through the door of his office he called to her to wait, but perhaps she didn't hear him, for she went straight on. The door closed slowly behind her and clicked shut.

White and Black Pearls

He Doted on White and Fell Victim to Black

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY

PEARLS HAVE to be white, the white that holds all the tender hues of morning, for some folks. Pale gold and blue "naivete," "delicacy," "sweetness," "simplicity," "delicacy," the exquisite appeal of ladies and white lace—these things that are like pearls and blonde girls, are what one man MUST have or he isn't happy! So he has always said—; so he honestly and hotly thinks. Since he hung his short legs down from the curved yellow seat in the first grade, he has fallen for the golden girls. None but white pearls agitated his heart.

Another fellow might lean to the subtler fascinations of the so called black pearl—the pearl that glows darkly like twilight with the forest fires lighted. For him—darkness, dusk, strangeness, mystery, veiled sparkle, hidden flame.

But the first gentleman "preferred blondes." Always. Never had a crush but what it was one. Flax or gold—genuine or artful imitation—but always a WHITE pearl. And he said, of course, that the ultimate BIRD would be one, too! All his friends were told that.

And one day he saw a BLACK pearl—just as opposite to the craving of his heart as the velvet night is to the pearl-shell dawn. And the man got her for "his own," as the songs go, at just the very first moment that he could bring the new dream true.

SHAMPOOS FOR BLANKETS

AREN'T SO COSTLY as for your crowning glory. You can get them cleaned for 50c, double $1.00. 5-day service—and they're sweet, fluffy and clean. Saves precious time these busy housecleaning days.

SPRING SUNSHINE shows up ugly wrinkles. Wonderful lotion prevents and eliminates them. Strengthens tissues, too. Made of bland oil rich in tissue building. $1.00. You'll look like sweet sixteen again.

TIME IS MONEY goes the saying. That's why dresses "semi made" are so popular these bustling days. I've found some in soft material in lovely Spring shades for only $1.29. All cut out. Complete with linen collars and cuffs, stamped for embroidery. A few stitches and you have a dainty new dress.

NEW DELICATELY COLORED protection for nails used by a certain manicurist keeps them faintly rosy and softly shining a whole week without further care. An investment of 50c weekly will make your finger tips a matter of pride and joy. No tips.

A SURE CURE for a shiny nose is this balm. A really efficient beautifier. More effective than powder in covering up the ugly shine. Imparts a sense of refreshing coolness, too. 75c. A beauty help that's a boon.

IN BEAUTIFUL FILET are Sardinia chair backs that have been selling for $1.75. Now 85c. Fine patterns, truly "different." With the help of these you can pull out an old chair into the light without a qualm. Oblongs to match for arms, 6x12, 50c.

A THOUGHT TO YOUR THROAT would be wise. Don't have a peaches and cream complexion and an olive tinted throat "neath your chin when you go out for the evening. A harmless whitener imparts a gleaming lustre to your arms, neck and shoulders. Will remain on until you wash it off. A boon to the boy friend—it won't rub off on his evening clothes.

AND WHILE WE'RE ON OUR WAY to evening festivities better think of eyes! Cream blended lightly along the edges frames the eyes with a hint of shadow and depth. Seems to increase the size of your eyes; makes them brilliant. $1.00. A night necessity.

PEOPLE AND POWDERS both vary widely. As you pick a friend, choose your powder—the kind that suits you. If you've a dry, sensitive skin I know the powder you should use. Both corrective and protective. Tints to match your complexion (new blush gives the glow of Youth). Only $1.00.

I'M STEALING MARTHA'S THUNDER. She's advising you all to put down your eggs now, 'cause eggs are lower in price. I've found a rare bargain in 5-gallon covered stoneware crocks in which you can put the "fruit of the hen." Only $1.00! Write early—the supply is limited.

I'VE BEEN MARATHONING around the shops finding good values for you. Watch my column for news of them. Just clip the items that interest you and send with 2c stamp for prompt information where they may be purchased.

PUFFED WHEAT. A Unique Cereal That Tastes Good When Nothing Else Does

MOST people grow tired of the same foods day after day at breakfast. Thus the start of many days is spoiled.

Just try this. Note then the difference that comes: Give the family the "something different" that they crave. Obtain a package of Puffed Wheat at any grocery store.

It's whole wheat puffed by steam to 8 times its normal size; then richly oven toasted.

It tastes like nutmeats; crunches in the mouth like fresh toast—totally and deliciously different from any other cereal known.

Its food value is that of fine wheat. Almost 20% is bran, but you would never guess it. Puffed Wheat is that rare combination: food that's good for you that you eat because you love it.

Serve with cream or milk, with fresh and cooked fruits; there are scores of ways, each one a new delight. Attractive suggestions for serving are on every package

By John P. Medbury

A WELL-KNOWN minister states that there are over two hundred routes to Heaven. There could be five hundred and a lot of us would still take the wrong road.

SOME people are funny. No matter where they go they always seem to get up a detour.

LIFE is really nothing but a highway to Heaven and every church is a service station.

PREACHERS are the speed cops.

THE path is rough but the ministers are doing their best to fix the roads.

ONE man stopped a fellow the other day and asked him which was the way to Heaven. He said, "I don't know, I never made the trip."

A NEW YORK CITY man wouldn't start for Philadelphia unless he consulted a map, but he'll try to get to Heaven without any directions at all.

HE thinks that to get to Paradise you have to drive to Florida and turn to the right.

ALL you have to do is talk to one Palm Beach real estate man to realize you're not in Heaven. Heaven is free.

THE best you can get in Palm Beach is water wings.

THE Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce claims that California is Heaven, but you don't see many people out there with feathers on their shoulders.

SAN FRANCISCO is supposed to be Paradise, but Pasadena gets all the tourists.

FRISCO hasn't stairs, but they've got the Golden Gate.

INSTEAD of listening to Gabriel's trumpet, all you can hear is the fog horns on the ferry boats.

THE climate is wonderful, but it's a little too chilly to be flying around with nightgowns on.

ONE fellow said he wasn't anxious to go to Heaven anyway. When he moves he wants to go to a place where there's steam heat.

HE says he doesn't want to live through another coal strike.

HE'S been doing a lot of reading lately and claims that he has a considerations janitor.

DAILY SHORT STORY

TERRY LEWEN, all the way from Denver, tramped wearily up the little cobbled street of the little village of Drumairdrie, in the Scottish Highlands. Somewhere near Drumairdrie Terry had a remote relative, an extravagant Scots laird who years ago had married a Denver girl rich enough to pay her passage across. The Denver girl was a cousin of Terry's mother. They had once been very intimate, but for several years the Lewens had not heard from her. So, when Terry elected to tour Europe after a four-year tour through Northwestern, his mother stipulated that he should call at Drumairdrie and ask for the Lady Alicia Stuart.

"I never could foresee happiness in that marriage," Mrs. Lewen had told him. "She was a lively, fun-loving girl and the Laird Stuart was the gruffest, dourest, snuffiest old Scotchman that ever ate burned oatmeal. But you will call on Alicia, Terry, and find out all about it."

Terry was not ill-pleased with his mission. Drumairdrie was a quaintly pretty village with moorland all about for a radius of a few miles and dark, craggy hills surrounding it. On the darkest and craggiest of these stood a gray, towered mass of masonry, a castle-stronghold, which Terry rightly guessed to be the home of the Stuarts. Certainly, it was not an overly cheerful place in which to house a bride from Denver.

"Why, a Western girl would wilt in that dungeon," said Terry. "It never occurred to mother that her cousin might have died. However, well soon know."

He stooped through the low door of the village inn and scandalized a ruddy-faced barmaid by asking for milk and buns. A few Americans had visited Drumairdrie, but this was the first of the species to demand such harmless articles. Terry asked her if Lady Stuart were at the castle. The girl looked at him in amazement.

"Eh, mon, ye're four years behin'. She's deid lang syne. Ye'll be no veesitin the castle o' Drumairdrie? Ye'll no be welcome. Yon laird's as crabbitt an' cracked as a loon. Shuts himsel' up in the grey walls all alane. His daughter, Lady Alicia, comes once in a while frae Lunnon tae see him. But he will never let her walk amangst us here an' nae-body kens what she looks like. But she's a bane body, an' ye'll no be welcome."

Terry, undaunted, took a room at the inn and that very afternoon went up the hill to the castle, gave his name and told his errand to a hairy retainer of the Stuart, and was told in short time to be off to America, that "he was no' wantit."

Terry was angered, but not discouraged. He wanted more detailed information of his relative's death and determined to get it. But the people of Drumairdrie were closemouthed and indeed knew very little of the laird's doings. Terry got him a gun and cruised the moor for grouse.

It was on one of his rambles that he met the moor-maiden. He had heard an aged shepherd speak of her. She was "an airy, sprightly lass wi' tangled, bonny looks." She was sweeter than the heather and lovely as a nymph, Terry thought, in spite of her ragged plaid, when he came upon her paddling her bare, brown feet in a brook.

It seemed that she had heard of him. "You're come to veesit Drumairdrie?" she asked.

Terry told her all about it. The moor-maid, Ruth was her name, she said, looked at him with big, wondering eyes.

"An' ye're from America where the Lady Alicia lived? She was a lovely lady, so good and fair. But she was no' suited for the Highlands. An' ye're beonnin' to the same land o'y! Ye're a bonny lad yerse.," she said with an arch look and a pout of her lips that made Terry want to kiss her. And after a few days he did.

No one would tell him about Ruth. The wizagers were suspicious of him and refused to talk.

"Would ye like to enter yon castle the nicht?" asked Ruth one warm day at sundown. "I'll show ye how. We'll go thegither an' it would be a grand adventure. Will ye come, man Terry?"

He yielded to the kissing impulse then and thrilled with joy when she nestled in his arms.

"Ye're bonny," she said again. "But ye'll no' be wantin' a country lass."

Terry was sure he would.

That night at moonlight she led him to the base of the crag, into a wide fissure in the rocks and through a hidden passage where his flash-lamp shone on dripping rocks. It was a relic of the days of rebellions and persecutions, she told him, and confessed him without hesitation up many rock-hewn steps.

They stood in a great, dim room. A case of books had swung back at Ruth's touch. Terry marveled at her freedom from nervousness.

"I'll be leavin' ye a minute," she said. "Ye'll be safe here, but I must spy out the lan' and ye're a noisy bairn, Terry, though ye kiss is sweet as bannocks in the honey."

He caught her and groaned her to him. "Will you marry me tomorrow, Ruth? Will you? And come to America with me?"

"Are ye serrious, lad? Then I'll think well o' it."

Ten minutes he waited and grew uneasy. Suddenly lights flashed brieht. A tall old man in Highland costume came in, leaning on the arm of a stately, queen-like girl of matchless form and beauty. The old man was bending his head affectionately towards her. Terry wished for a large, deep and wide hole in the ground to swallow him up. What had happened to Ruth? Had she been caught? What would they do to her?

The laird and the courtly girl stopped and stared at him. Terry looked in her eyes with dawning knowledge.

"This is the young man, father," she said with no trace of Scots accent. "What would you say about him?"

"Ruth!" Terry could not restrain the word.

"Yes, Ruth it is," returned the laird, coming over and looking at him closely. "Ah, yes. He has some o' the bonny looks of your mither, Ruth Alicia. An' you would be about marryin' my daughter? Weel, here she is." He gave Alicia to Terry's arms, and walked muttering to himself over to the window.

"Forgive the deception, Terry," she pealed. "I like to be loved for myself and when I am home I always go dressed like a peasant girl. I know you liked me in the masquerade. And the laird is a bit queer. He would have none of you until I came from London the day after you arrived. I heard of you and persuaded him to let me investigate you. Then I just could not help loving you and I set myself out to make you love me. Do you still want me? And will you take me to Denver for a honeymoon? And call me Alicia, not Ruth?"

"Yes to everything," said Terry. "I shall have excellent news of my relatives to bring my mother."

TODAY'S BULLETIN

The Rev. Dr. Lewis M. Roper, Baptist minister of Johnson City, Tenn., is quoted in the news dispatches as follows:

"If the church members and church-goers would quit drinking liquor the bootleggers would starve to death."

On which side of the controversy does the Rev. Dr. Roper stand?

Certainly no Christian wants to stand by and see thousands of our wealthiest and most influential citizens starve to death.

When asked for a statement, Mr. Earl Carroll, prominent local citizen, said:

"It is unfair for the church-goers to claim all the credit. There are many of us in other walks of life who have contributed gladly and generously to prevent bootleggers from starving to death."

Mr. Carroll.

* * *

Mr. Carroll declared the Rev. Mr. Roper's statement was obviously propaganda to discredit the glorious record of the Wild Party.

THE FOXY GRANDPA INTERESTING DAILY BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

"I'LL bet this jungle is just full of monkeys," said Bobby as we unpacked our kits and prepared to camp for a few days.

"Yes," said Bunny, "this part of Western Africa is real monkeyland, all right."

"I wonder how soon we'll see a monkey," mused Bobby.

"Sooner than you expect," said Bunny. "I'll wager they've seen us already."

"Do you think so?" I asked.

"Sure," said Bunny, looking up into a tree-top. "They're see us before we see them."

We went on unpacking and after we were all set, we got our lunch. Then I thought I would lie down and take a little nap.

I dozed off and was dreaming of circuses and monkeys and once I thought I heard the chatter of them.

But I just turned over and went to sleep again. Once I woke up and looked around for Bobby. But he wasn't in sight and I closed my eyes for forty more winks, knowing that he was all right and not far away, because Bobby is a sensible little chap and knows that it is dangerous to go off by yourself in a wild place like the one where we were.

Finally Bunny came bounding back and sat down to eat a root he had found. He said it was good and if all the roots around there were that good, he didn't care how long we stayed.

"Where's Bobby?" he asked.

"Somewhere around," I answered, raising myself on one elbow and looking for the boy. "Wonder where he's gotten to now."

Just then I heard a scramble up in a tree near me, and then I saw Bobby's chubby legs, drop down out of a branch and climb down that tree so quickly that if it had been dark I would have been sure it was a monkey and not a boy.

Then he just stood and stared at us. He couldn't speak.

"What is it, Bobby?" I asked, for I could see the boy had had an awful fright.

"Foxy Grandpa," Bobby gasped, "I was just climbing that tree and I got way up to the top of it, and there I found the coolest little house you ever saw. It was like a platform—built out of the branches around. They were woven together and made a regular bed. I just lay down on it to try it and I must have fallen asleep, because the next thing I knew there was a big monkey with a baby in her arms looking at me and scolding."

"Did she hurt you?" I asked.

"I didn't give her time," laughed the boy, "and anyhow she had that baby in her arms just like a woman."

"You got in the wrong berth," laughed Bunny. "She was a chimpanzee. You know the father chimpanzee builds a nest like that for his family, and then he sleeps on the ground to protect them and to keep animals from climbing the tree."

TITLED RAIL MAN TO SPEAK IN BOSTON

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

Sir Henry Thornton, president of the National Canadian Railways, is the April 16 speaker before the Boston Chamber of Commerce. Sir Henry is well known in this city and was among the contributors of business articles to the annual New Year's special financial section of the Boston Evening American. He is one of the very few Americans with a British title.

Sir Henry Thornton

He was born in Logansport, Ind., in 1871, and is today one of the foremost figures in the Land of the Maple Leaf.

"Half my friends are waiting for a rally to get out of long stock," remarks the Old State Street Trader. "While the other half are waiting for a rise to sell them 'short.'"

I hear, in State Street circles, considerable criticism of the action of the Boston & Maine Railroad in buying its years' supply of steel rails in Germany. Of course, the sentiment is that a home industry should have received the patronage, especially at the time when the German steel trade is reported making big inroads into sales in this country.

* * *

There are some defenders of the Boston & Maine, however, who declare the road is in such a position that it ought not to be criticised for taking advantage of the cheapest market.

It is apparent, therefore, that the proxies held by Amster were voted for the management slate of directors, excepting Meyer and Parker.

NEW ENGLAND PROSPERS, DECLARES C. F. WEED

In special New England number of the Independent, to be issued Saturday, New England's problems are discussed by certain prominent citizens. C. F. Weed, vice-president of First National Bank of Boston, says: "By and large New England industry is prosperous. In 1925 New England's industrial production was $971 per capita against $594 for United States, and average deposits stood $473 against $294. According to last census, per capita wealth of New England was $1,197, against $786 for country as a whole." Howard Cooley, former president of Boston Chamber of Commerce, says: "It is my confident belief that New England is coming back; that her people the thinking more deeply upon industrial subjects; that her native shrewdness and her other big assets —among them invigorating climate and excellent transportation—will enable this great section of the country to overcome or to offset those temporary disadvantages that have threatened her industrial life."

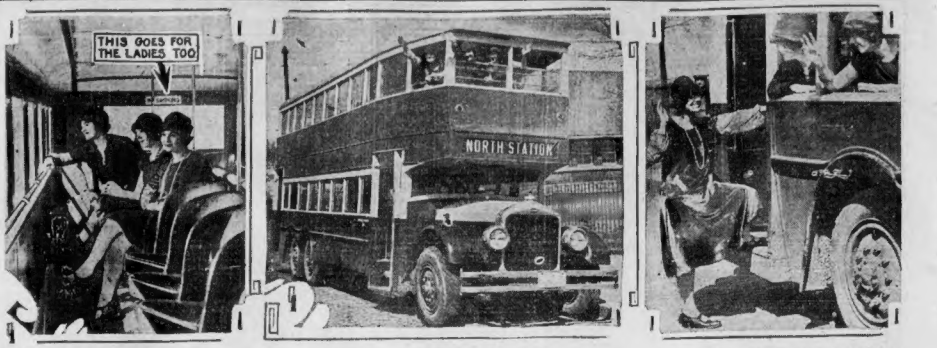
DOUBLE DECKER "EL" BUSES SOON TO PLY ON FENWAY



New double deck buses, with enclosed top deck and luxurious seats, will be operated from the John Boyle O'Reilly statue on the Fenway to the North Station.

The vehicles will have a seating capacity of 61 passengers, 30 on top deck and 31 on the lower deck. The buses are equipped with pneumatic tires and are very comfortable to ride in.

The enclosed top deck, high above the street, will afford good views and, tell it not in Gath, opportunity for spooning.

FINANCE TODAY

By B. C. Forbes

What is a "one-man" concern? Investors are often told to beware of them.

A reader wants to know if Ford's is a one-man enterprise, if there are many one-man concerns, which they are and what it is that is dangerous about them.

Ford used to run a one-man business. After Ford quarreled with his strongest associates of his early days he became, to use a hearty phrase, the whole thing. Had he died, the effect unquestionably would have been disastrous. Which then his son, Edsel, has developed into a very earnest, conscientious, industrious executive. While not a genius, he is declared by those in the automobile industry to be quite capable. Also, Ford now has something of an organization.

Edsel's forging to the front has rendered Ford's no longer a one-man structure.

Many of our present-day gigantic enterprises were at one time one-man affairs. But most of them have outgrown their status. The reason is that, while every great organization is "the lengthened shadow of one man," business and industry are now conducted on such a colossal scale that of necessity even the ablest giant must enlist about him brainy associates to help in handling all the reins.

Woolworth once told me that his was essentially a one-man business for years. Then he ruined his health and it was while he lay weak and weak in the hospital that he awakened to the fact that, if his business was to expand as he hoped, he would have to share the managerial responsibilities.

One of the comments often made about W. C. Durant is that he has always tried to run a one-man organization. One of his closest associates told me several years ago that Durant took nobody into the confidence. I understand, however, that of late Durant has modified this policy.

Bethlehem Steel for a number of years was distinctly of the one-man type. Charles M. Schwab was the whole works. The company was so weak financially that Schwab had to endorse personally every piece of paper issued to raise money. By and by Eugene G. Grace grew in stature and developed into an abler steel man than Schwab, according to the repeated declarations of the latter. Today Bethlehem Steel no longer is simply Schwab.

territory. We certainly have unoccupied land to spare in our country. What a pity our dog-in-the-Immigration-manger policy should keep good men and women out—the men and women that came here in years past and made the country what it is.

THIS IS THE TOWN of Picacho, named for a tall mountain that was a landmark for early pioneers in their covered wagons. From this point starts the new branch of the Southern Pacific, that will run through the Casa Grande Valley with its 120,000 acres soon to be irrigated by water from the Coolidge dam on the Gila River.

WE HAVE the land, the water, the money—we lack people that want to work the land and know how. And we hold our nation back by refusing admittance to the most desirable people on earth, that would come to us now from the troubles of war, as they formerly came from the troubles of religion.

IN THIS ONE STATE there is health, room and opportunity for half the people in the country. Perhaps workers for these new irrigated lands will be brought from Porto Rico, a few thousand of them at least. They are "citizens" and can come and go, even as contract labor. And they can be shipped from Porto Rico to Galveston for twenty dollars a head, less than the freight on a cow. The human cow takes less room, loads and unloads himself, and no "Cruelty to Animals Society" prevents packing him in. Would it not be better to admit Europeans brought here by the ambition and courage that brought our ancestors, rather than bring in, by shiploads, Porto Ricans that may not like the climate?

TO TALK ABOUT the productive power, of the soil, desert land, some of it washed down from the mountains, when water is added, seems like a fairy story and more unbelievable than Jack and the Beanstalk. One acre of desert land flying by will produce as much as a carload of lettuce, melons or other produce.

GUESSWORK? No, go to California's Imperial Valley and see. You could buy "worthless," arid desert land there recently for little or nothing. You cannot buy it at all now. There, 25,000 acres planted with cantaloupes ship out more than 20,000 carloads a year, and 20,000 acres of lettuce send out 15,000 carloads from what once was called "worthless desert land."

THIS IS a hospitable country, and at each station, Tucson especially, they ask you to stay, because they have "the finest climate in the world." It is literally true in each case, for the climate is perfect—no climate can be better than that.

AT WELLTON, Mr. Winsor, president of the Arizona Senate and champion booster for his State, comes aboard to tell you that at Yuma, an hour away, the Chamber of Commerce and the Indian band will be at the station to welcome you.

YOU REMEMBER in your illustrated Bible the gentlemen that went to spy out the Promised Land and came back staggering under the weight of one bunch of grapes. Senator Winsor could beat them. Compared with the Yuma Mesa, that Promised Land was just thin soil, hardly worthy of irrigation. And look how that Promised Land has run out. You could not weaken the soil of the Yuma Mesa with five thousand years of cultivation. It is more than one hundred feet deep. To fertilize it would be to insult it, like giving ten cents to Rockefeller. And so it is, pretty much, all over the State. The Yuma Mesa, by the way, according to government reports, is most free from frost of any place in the United States.

W. R. HEARST has one of his five sons at school in Tucson, and that young man, in his teens, reports that Arizona is "The Cats." All American youth will know what that means. It is the highest praise. You really ought to see Arizona, and all the rest of this country.

It is one big wonder, one big opportunity.

P. S.—They like President Coolidge all through this country. On the crowded observation platform one man, in blue, says to another in speckled gray: "We need a man like Coolidge in these times. They can't control him." "No," says the speckled gray man, "and they can't stampede him, either." The platform

Referendum on Prohibition a Real Right of the People

THE technical legality of New York's proposed advisory State-wide referendum on Prohibition, challenged by Louis Marshall of that State, is upheld by professional authority equally eminent.

But the technical standpoint is not the broadest or wisest standpoint from which to view this great question.

There is at issue a fundamental problem in government, involving respect or disrespect for law, temperance or increasing intemperance — in short, going to the root of social welfare.

And while it is true that our constitutional system vests in the State Legislature discretion and authority in determining public policy, its whole spirit assumes that the Legislature shall ascertain and give due weight to the wishes of the people.

It is not unlawful, but very usual and commendable for lawmakers as individuals to sound out the sentiments of their constituents.

The proposed advisory State-wide referendum for the State of New York simply consolidates this practice in a manner to disclose the sentiment of ALL the constituents.

If it is NOT legal, it SHOULD BE legal.

If the Constitution does not permit it to be done, then the Constitution SHOULD BE CHANGED.

There is no interest of the people which is more important than temperance.

There is no menace to the people today more dangerous than the breakdown which has come to the progress of temperance through the failure of the experiment in Prohibition.

Mr. Marshall's alarm lest the adoption of an advisory referendum on Prohibition in his State should result in a flood of referenda on a variety of subjects bears the earmarks of having been hastily manufactured.

Whenever another problem of equal concern shall arise among the people, the Legislature could take no wiser or safer position than to ask from the people a similar showing of hands.

For, after all, Mr. Marshall should not forget that this is a government of the people, by the people, for the people.

It is not a government by a minority.

By an informal and incomplete referendum through the press, eighty per cent. of the people have indicated profund dissatisfaction with Prohibition in the seventh year of its trial.

The accuracy of this poll has been challenged. Of its substantial accuracy, so far as it went, we have no doubt. But the existence of doubt in any respectable quarter is good ground for taking a poll in which all citizens can participate, and from which only those will abstain who do so by deliberate choice.

That is the purpose, the fair and just purpose, of the Karle-Phelps Referendum bill which has just passed the State Senate in New York.

It supplies a timely and convenient method by which the people throughout the Union's most populous and influential State can give to the lawmakers of the nation, the illumining benefit of their views upon the most discussed and the most hotly controverted topic of the time.

To question in a narrow, technical fashion the legality of such a valuable illumination, is to substitute flyspecks for perspective.

Basically, the people have a RIGHT to make known their views upon this or any other issue of public policy.

Concerted attempt to gag such expression is inconsistent with the spirit of our institutions and an outrage on democracy.

The people will justly hold to account those who shall try to deny to them the exercise of this right.

If the supporters of Prohibition are the good and prudent citizens they are commonly believed to be, they will scorn Mr. Marshall's suggestion of a taxpayer's suit to upset the proposed public expression of opinion on this question as a cheap subterfuge, and instead will welcome with sincerity the chance to have a thorough poll.

Too Many Leaks

IN a leaking ship, with water rising in the hold, it is a poor policy to use a bailer that spills more than it carries.

It is an especially poor policy when there is a better bailer at hand, one functioning less like a sieve.

Those who want to save the ship more than to indulge an exploded theory are telling Uncle Sam to change utensils.

Lady, Do Cover Your Feet

You Think They Are Beautiful—They Are Not

THIS IS THE BEAUTIFUL MISS JULIETTE COMPTSON, BRITISH SCREEN STAR, MUCH ADMIRED. OUR FRIENDLY ADVICE TO THE LADY IS, "COVER YOUR FEET."

These are days of short skirts, conspicuous knees, CONSIDERABLE NUDITY.

Ladies that once wore skirts to their ankles and "swished" them only a few inches up in the air now dance with bare legs and bare feet on the stage, almost everything else bare.

On behalf of the patient public, we wish to tell this lady of the bare foot photograph and all other ladies that FEET ARE NOT BEAUTIFUL, especially after they have worn tight shoes.

The impression that this photograph seeks to give, in our opinion, is not womanly or highly moral as it ought to be. It would seem that the lady is photographed with nothing on but a flimsy and unreliable sort of a swansdown cloak.

That, however, is not our business. It was silly enough when the United States Government tried to tell Lady Cathcart what her past OUGHT to be. It is all we can do to regulate Hollywood and Broadway. We are not going to tell British screen stars how THEY must dress.

But we do tell this lady, out of the kindness of our heart, this:

THE NEXT TIME YOU ARE PHOTOGRAPHED, WEAR SILK STOCKINGS. OR, SOME KIND OF STOCKINGS AND NICE SLIPPERS.

Your curled and twisted toes indicate a past that included tight shoes, which are included, unfortunately, in almost every woman's past.

That which is hidden loses its expression. The feet of women have been hidden away, pinched, abused for centuries. Bringing them suddenly out into the daylight and letting them say, "See how beautiful I am," is a failure.

On the other hand, ugly bare feet and legs on the stage or in photographs may have their good side. They may make young men realize that women are after all "not so very wonderful," and thus make it easy for the young men to attend to business.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I HAVE just given Lucille the air.

I have told her to go out and tell her troubles to the fire hydrant or bite herself to death if it pleases her better. See if I care!

I have been rude and noisy to that girl in spite of the fact that I'm supposed to bind up the bleeding hearts of humanity. And I hereby serve warning that if any more like Lucille come along I'm going to be rude and noisy to them, too. This is why:

This is the seventeenth time that Lucille has come to my office within three weeks. It is not, however, the quantity of Lucille's visits that has aroused my wrath, it is the quality.

I was very sorry for Lucille at first. She was Misunderstood. She was Misunderstood by everyone. Her mother had misunderstood her and her teachers had misunderstood her and her boss had misunderstood her and now her husband was misunderstanding her with great violence twenty-four hours a day.

I listened with sad surprise to Lucille's story. I always listen with sad surprise to stories like that. How can people possibly be so abused when baseball bats are so cheap. "However," thought I, "maybe she doesn't favor baseball bats as much as I do." So I put away my doubts and proceeded to advise Lucille.

It really wasn't difficult to advise her. Her problem was fairly simple—a very little effort and ingenuity on her part would solve it. I told her how it might be done, while still retaining her domestic connections.

She listened to be pensively. A faint hope began to dawn in her eye. I felt my chest expand.

"Here," said I, "is a sweet, sensible girl whose whole life has been wrecked for lack of a little sensible advice. Thank goodness, I've been able to put her on the right track. Queer how I've a knack for doing things like that."

Well, as I was saying, I got all smoked up with optimism over Lucille. She still that way when she called the second time. She was still being Misunderstood, but there was some new data on the subject. Had she followed my advice? Well—yes, she'd meant to—only she'd really not had a chance. And she'd been feeling so ill and broken-hearted. And how would I feel if—

So I pulled Lucille through that time.

Two days later I pulled her through again.

In between times she telephoned me several times, sobbing bitterly. She also wrote me letters. In fact, I gave about three-quarters of my boss' time for a couple of weeks to helping Lucille escape from Being Misunderstood.

And now, finally, I've given Lucille the air, and only my early Christian training prevented me from heaving her bodily into the nidst thereof.

I have given Lucille the air because I have discovered that the last thing on earth she wants is to escape from Being Misunderstood.

In short, the lady's main business in life consists of Being Misunderstood and getting advice on the subject.

If she ever became really understood she'd be out of a job.

Ever since she was a little bitty girl, she has gone around with her tonsils swimming in tears of self-pity. Grief has been her stock in trade.

And you'll have to hand it to Lucille, it was a good hunch! She's taken years and years of other people's time getting advised. If she had been selling life insurance they'd have kicked her out. If she'd been drunk or disorderly they'd rung for the police, but she was simply Misunderstood—and who can deny comfort and solace to a lady who's misunderstood?

Here's one who can—but it took seventeen visits, eight letters and an uncounted number of telephone calls to bring me to the point.

The human highway is considerably gummed up with Lucilles.

Under the pretense of seeking advice, they ruthlessly monopolize the public sympathy and attention. Of course, the public doesn't mind for a while. There are few sweeter pleasures than that of telling the other fellow how to run his life. And Lucille knows it.

So in the full assurance that a pleasant time is being had by all, she proceeds to indulge her insatiable Egotism. Under no normal conditions could Lucille command the attention which she gains by Being Misunderstood.

SCIENCE MUST BE TOLERANT

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

ONE of the oldest and most honorable institutions of Great Britain the Royal Society, the rest of whose name "for Improving Natural Knowledge," indicates the aim of its founders, is reported to be in danger of turning Sir Oliver Lodge out of its doors because he believes in "spiritualism" and communication between the living and the dead.

That would be an act of folly, that would smirch the reputation of one of the greatest of the world's scientific associations. It would be an exhibition of intolerance at which the opponents of science—and let us not forget that it has very bitter opponents—would be entitled to "point the finger of scorn."

I do not at all believe in "spiritualism." I think that Sir Oliver Lodge is mistaken when he supposes that he receives messages from dead persons, or converses with them or sees their forms. I feel both surprise and regret that a man of his great scientific abilities should subscribe to such a creed. But I do not think that in doing so he causes any harm to the Royal Society or to the cause of science.

I believe that in driving out for such a reason a man who, during a long generation, has been one of its most conspicuous, active, and useful members, the society would harm itself and harm the cause of science, while doing nothing whatever toward enlightening the public mind on the real nature of "spiritualism" and the claims made in its behalf. On the contrary, it would strengthen the support of the spiritualistic cult, for the most dangerous ally that any cause can admit into its camp is prejudice.

If the Royal Society had turned Sir Isaac Newton out of its doors on account of his theological writings, which some considered as the product of his "dotage," and others as, in Brewster's words, "calculated to promote the spiritual interests of thousands," would that have aided the cause of science, or enhanced the reputation of the society?

Both John Kepler and Tycho Brahe sometimes cast horoscopes. Should they have been turned out of the astronomical fold on that account? If they had been turned out, it would have been bad for astronomy, because no two men known in history ever did more than they for the advancement of that science.

Sir William Crookes certified the genuineness of the spiritualistic miracles of D. D. Home, the notorious medium, but the Royal Society never withdrew any of the many distinguished honors that it bestowed upon Crookes, and which he had brilliantly earned by his scientific discoveries. Alfred Russel Wallace, co-discoverer with Darwin of the principle of natural selection, and another "honor man" of the Royal Society, turned "spiritualist" in his later life; but that did not hurt the cause of science, and the great society left him undisturbed in his private beliefs.

It would be a great pity and an equally great misfortune if science should begin to invite the reproach of intolerance. There is just the shadow of a suspicion that its immense specialization may eventually tend in that direction. If the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism should find members among the ranks of scientists it is safe to predict that they will come from the most extreme specialists. The inhabitant of a deep hole may see one star in the sky, but the heavens are concealed from him.

Broad, connected studies in science, if they lead to no proof of the existence of a spiritual element in man and in the universe, also fail utterly to furnish disproof of such existence. The reason is because they do not stand on the same plane with what we call the spiritual.

There appear to be minds which cannot conceive the existence of spirit contrasted with matter, just as there are eyes unable to perceive certain waves of light. To such minds Oliver Lodge's assertion that there are spiritual beings far superior to ourselves in the universe, and even in this world, seems nonsense; while to others it appears self-evident, without any regard to the peculiar doctrines of "spiritualism."

The Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

THERE are so many shining things to sing which Earth has loved to praise, rare virtues making wise men's platidits ring down echoing days, that it seems strange for one to choose a theme so dull as this of mine; poor patience lacks the glamour of a dream where tinselled fancies shine. In quiet garb the good I sing is dressed; few head as it goes past; by few its hidden virtues are confessed, few know its fruitage vast. Yet Patience is a guest whom mighty kings do well to entertain, for always in its lowliness it brings new glories in its train. And always it is greater in the end than at the first it seemed; woo Patience, therefore, as a trusted friend and gain the dreams you dreamed.

The First False Step -:- By Senator W. E. Borah

On February 22, in Chicago, Senator Borah sounded the key-note of a campaign to force the Senate to reconsider its action in voting the United States into the World Court without allowing the subject to be debated on the floor of the Senate. Borah said in part:

IT IS not surprising that the leaders of Europe have declared that in entering the World Court of the League of Nations we have taken the first step, and that the second step is inevitable and must be speedy, namely, entrance into the League. It is not surprising that it is declared that the vote upon the Court sounded the death knell of Washington's policies. It is not surprising that the Foreign Minister of Great Britain advised his friends in Europe not to say anything about the second step which was to be taken. In other words, do not let the people know what is going on.

WHEN we were discussing the reservations in the Senate a reservation was offered to the effect that the members of the Court ought not to resort to war in the enforcement of the Court's decrees. It was rejected because the Senate was told that Europe would not tolerate any interference with her right to go to war whenever she wanted to go to war. Since the signing of the armistice there have been twenty-eight wars in Europe—wars for oil, wars for territory, wars of imperialism, wars by strong against the weak.

There is your record of Europe's willingness to accept American principles. I will pause while some one will name a single American principle in behalf of peace which Europe has accepted. I will pause again while some one will name a single old-time European principle in behalf of war which Europe has surrendered.

WAS imperialism ever so flagrant and world-wide as it is found embodied in the Versailles treaty? Has not the League become the sorry, sordid lackey of the Versailles treaty?

Was injustice ever more flagrant and the violation of solemn pledges toward a weak people ever more brutal than that of the European Powers relative to Syria, where men, women and children are being decimated under the mandate of the League and in the name of peace?

And when a great Power intimated to the League with reference to Syria that it be quiet, did not the League crouch at the feet of its master like a whipped slave? And in this program of imperialism and exploitation, in these policies, the Court, of which we are to be a member, is to be the adviser and counsellor

WAR A POOR WAY TO SETTLE DISPUTES

By DR. FRANK CRANE

NOBODY gained anything as far as we can see in the strike from which the coal districts are now recovering.

There has been an enormous loss of money and a number of people suffered distress for being out of work.

War is a poor way to settle anything, either a sure enough war or an economic conflict.

War means waste invariably. It is disastrous not only while it goes on, but it is disastrous in its consequences.

War is caused by obstinacy and vanity.

It is impossible to make war without inflaming passions of hate and suspicion, and these are always injurious.

After a war is finished there is a treaty of peace. If people were clever enough they could make the treaty of peace first and then there would be no need of a war afterwards.

The parties concerned ought to know that they will never settle a dispute until they come together and discuss terms. If government is good for anything it ought to see that no strike or lockout or other disturbance will interfere with the regular production of the necessities of life. And war, whether it takes the form of a strike or a lockout, is an offense against the public. There is but one cure for it, and that is to enforce arbitration of some kind.

It is the same kind of an argument that objects to arbitration of any kind of dispute that objects to arbitration in war between nations.

When we think of the suffering and loss that this strike has occasioned, not only to the working miners, but to the public at large, the conviction is forced upon us that war is a bad thing.

It has never seemed to us that those who are sure of the righteousness of their position should object to intelligent arbitration. If a wise third party cannot be made to see the justice of our cause then our own eyes must be somewhat biased.

If we could eliminate all the vanity and self-sufficiency of both sides, few strikes would last long.
